Polish Leader Asks U.S. Aid In Red Dispute

LONDON. (AP) — Polish Prime Minister Stanislaw Mikolajczyk has appealed directly to the United States for intervention in his country's long dispute with Russia, seeking clearcut guarantees of post-war independence as well as a new Baltic border.

Sources close to the Polish cabinet reported that the United States intervention was sought as an alternative to a Russian request that Poland sign away its territory east of the Curzon line in return for later territorial adjustments at Germany's expense.

(In Washington there has been some discussion in diplomatic circles over the possibility that President Roosevelt might issue a formal statement on the Russo-Polish situation shortly. It was expected, however, that such a statement, if made, will simply reaffirm the United States' desire for a free and independent Poland and refrain from any specific commitments.)

Plan To Regulate Power Sale Drafted

WASHINGTON. (AP) — Public power to be developed under the billion-dollar flood control bill would be sold primarily at the dam under an amendment approved by the senate commerce committee.

Under the original senate draft of the bill, the secretary of the interior would have been authorized to build transmission lines to dispose of power from the score or more of multiple-purpose dams planned for post-war construction.

The amendment would permit construction of such lines only if "90 per cent of the firm power produced shall not be demanded or purchased within three years after completion of the generating facilities."

Savings resulting from use of public power by distributing concerns, the amendment declares, must be passed on to the consuming public.

The amendment also would permit states where the dams are located to tax the power production facilities. But the states may not appraise, for taxing purposes, that portion of capital investment required for flood control purposes.

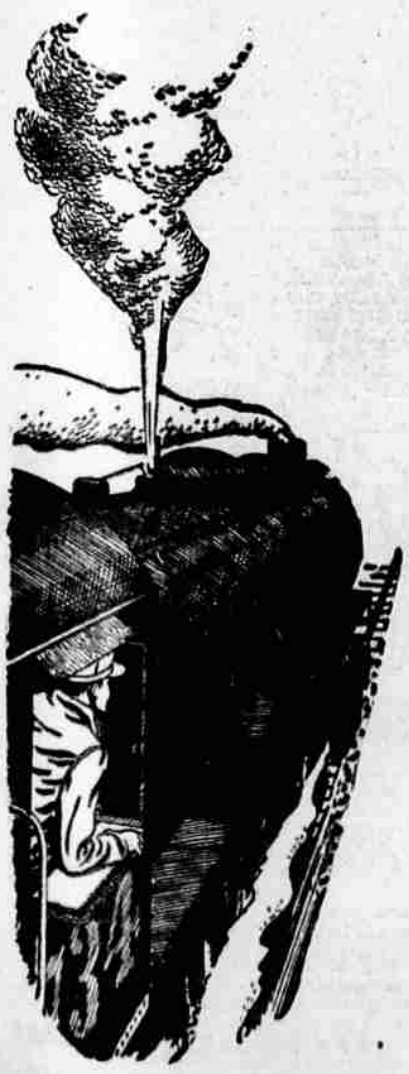
Next time you hear a Southern Pacific train whistle in the night, think of it as something more than a lonely, haunting sound. It is a reassuring sound—a promise that even while you sleep, the war trains are rolling. It's the confident voice of an industry that's doing the biggest job in its history, and will be in there pitching long after the war is over.

Wouldn't you like to know the language of the train whistles? Below we show you:

What S. P. train whistles mean



We haven't room to explain all the whistles, but here are the commonest ones. The "o" stands for a short sound, the dash means a longer sound.

■■●■ Warning whistle when train is approaching a highway crossing.

●●● When train is running, this means it will stop at next station, which is not a regular stop. If train is standing still, this signal warns that it is about to back up.

■■ One long whistle is sounded a mile before train reaches stations, railroad crossings, drawbridges, etc.

■●●● Signal for brakeman to protect rear of train. He must go down the track with necessary flagman's signals.

●●●■ Signal for brakeman to protect front of train.

■■■■ This signal orders brakeman to return from the west.

■■■■■ This signal recalls brakeman from the east.

■●● This tells other trains that a second section is following.

●● This is the engineer's answer to most signals from other trains.

●●●●●● A succession of short sounds is a warning to persons or livestock on the track.
