Lumbering
Progress Told
By Ellsworth

WASHINGTON — (AP) — There's no danger of exhaustion of the Douglas fir forests under present lumbering practices, Rep. Ellsworth (R.-Ore.) says.

Ellsworth said in an interview here that he had been told in New York that legislation enacted by the last congress represented more advancement than had been obtained from congress in several years past.

Among those bills were measures to permit the forest service to enter into cooperative sustained yield agreements with private timber owners, to complete the forest inventory and to expand forest fire protection. These measures, which Ellsworth shepherded through the house, were initiated by the late Sen. McNary (R.-Ore.).

Actually, Ellsworth told a reporter, there has been greater advancement in sound lumbering practices during the war period than in the 20 years preceding. The tree farm movement was expanded to about 2,500,000 acres during that period, he said, explaining that its members were pledged to careful harvest, the preservation of seed trees, prevention of fires and use of modern methods of slash disposal.

Ellsworth said the depletion of Douglas fir was probably no more than 10,000,000,000 board feet a year during the war period as compared to eight billion feet as a normal cut. He thought developments in processing woods during the war period probably would result in a new type of post-war mills.

"Instead of huge mills turning out nothing but boards, we'll probably see smaller plants designed to utilize a large percentage of by-products, make plywood and processed wood all in the same group of operations," he predicted.

The Dalles Area Seeks Irrigation Survey

THE DALLES — (AP) — The United States reclamation service has been petitioned for a survey to determine feasibility of an irrigation project to serve 50,000 acres of land in The Dalles area.

The petition, sent to the regional director in Boise, states that the proposed district contains 4300 acres planted in cherries, 1000 acres in peaches, 1000 acres in apricots and 800 acres in producing truck gardens.

The petition was endorsed by State Engineer Charles Stricklin. The survey would involve study of water sources, including the Columbia or Deschutes rivers, or storage of waters taken from White river, Dog river, Fifteen Mile creek and its tributaries, and Five Mile creek.

Early automobiles frightened so many horses and created so many runaways that one manufacturer mounted a dummy horse's head at the front of his vehicle to fool old Dobbin.
