

West Project Drawn Up

Idaho—A list of project construction has been prepared for the northwest bureau of reclamation and expenditures of $369,900, Washington, $59,681,000 in 1943, $12,000 in Idaho and $90 in Montana.

Under this, the bureau's reclamation said it was prepared to make the program recommended by the U. S. house committee on irrigation and reclamation chairmanship of Rep. (Idaho).

Under an early report on resources of the (Columbia) drainage basin, contemplating their highest beneficial use for irrigation, power development, flood control, navigation, fish and wildlife and other purposes.

The inventory said about 30 projects would provide for irrigating 1,778,000 acres of new land, giving supplemental irrigation to about the same acreage and "installing 800,000 additional kilowatts of firm power capacity."

The projects will enable the states to support populations "several times" greater than now and "also will give employment to returning service men during construction and permanency in industries, and through settlement opportunities on irrigated land."

'Stay In School', Army Man Advises

The most patriotic thing any young man in school can do today is to stay in school as long as possible and take advantage of every opportunity it offers prior to enlistment in the armed forces, declared Capt. S. W. Rawls Jr., who was in Eugene Wednesday from the headquarters of the ninth service command, Fort Douglas, Utah.

Capt. Rawls, who is touring the state discussing various phases of pre-induction training with educators, commented that the army considers it of utmost importance for young men to learn all they can and get as much schooling as possible before they enlist.

The schools have done an excellent job in pre-induction training, he said, pointing out that a great many needs of the armed forces have been met by young men who were trained in schools before they enlisted.

While in Eugene, Capt. Rawls conferred with Dr. Henry M. Gunn, superintendent of schools; and members of the faculty of Eugene and University high schools. He left Wednesday afternoon for Springfield and planned to be in Cottage Grove and Roseburg Thursday.
