

Keep your Red Cross at his side

Many Americans in enemy prison camps owe their lives to the steady stream of food packages, clothing and medical supplies they receive through Red Cross.

"Java and sinkers"—what a welcome touch of home for tired soldiers in distant battle areas. All the kind things you'd like to do for these boys, the Red Cross does for you.

Bottled life! Red Cross blood plasma from patriotic Americans surges into the veins of a badly wounded Yank, just behind the front lines.

In whatever far-off corner of the world our fighting men may be... perhaps thousands of miles from home... Red Cross pushes through to them, bringing its vital supplies.

Thousands of bombed-out refugees... our allies... have been provided with desperately needed food and clothing by Red Cross. Their tearful gratitude would warm your heart.
