Brazil Hopes for Big Wool Crop Increase

RIO DE JANEIRO—(U.P.)—Brazilian shepherders are hoping for longer wool and more mutton as a result of what is believed to be the world's biggest experiment with artificial insemination. The agriculture ministry which plans to inseminate 100,000 ewes this year announced one-third of the job has been completed. Twice as many lambs as usual are expected, each the offspring of a scientifically chosen sire. Average weight of each lamb at birth is expected to go up about a pound and a half.

Most Robbed Indiana Banker to Quit Business

CARBON, Ind. (U.P.)—Judge B. Marshall, president of the Carbon State Bank, announced today that he was going out of business July 1.

"Let somebody else's bank be the most frequently robbed financial institution in Indiana," Marshall said.

Marshall, 71, is sole employe of the bank. He said the voluntary liquidation not only would paralyze the Carbon banking industry but also the holdup and burglary business.

Actually, however, locking the bank doors for good will be only a formality, for Marshall has conducted his business with the doors locked since 1940.

Marshall was the victim of one $5000 holdup and three visits by yeggmans during the late 1930's and in 1940. Then he decided he'd keep the doors locked all the time and admit only people he recognized.

The precautionary measure failed to work, however. In 1944, two men rapped on the bank door during business hours. Marshall thought he knew them, so he admitted them. They stuck a gun in his ribs and took $500 in bank funds.

Today, Marshall still keeps the doors locked, 24 hours a day. Patrons observe regular banking hours, but Marshall goes to work at 8:30 a. m. and stays until 5 p. m.
