Rooms Needed For Builders

An urgent appeal for housing for approximately 50 carpenters and other building mechanics coming to Eugene to work on a 130-home project on Highway 99 north of the Elmira junction was made Wednesday by James C. Walker, president of the Acme Contracting Co. of Portland.

The builder said ground had already been broken for the development, and workers were available if rooms could be provided for them in Eugene. He emphasized that they would be residents here for six months or a year, since his company has additional work to do in the area.

Persons having rooms to rent were requested to call Mr. Walker at 3240. Key personnel are already on the job and housing for workers is an important factor in speeding construction.

The contractor, a former major in the Army engineers, recently was discharged after being hospitalized for ills contracted while he served in the Aleutians. A veteran of 25 years in the contracting business, he recently established headquarters in Portland.

He said materials for the project had been guaranteed through the regional office of Wilson Wyatt, national housing administrator. Plans call for a water supply through the Bethel Water district, power from the nearby Bonneville substation, and sewage disposal through approved septic tanks.

Twenty-four houses are to be roofed by the fall. His firm also is planning to build 100 homes in the Springfield area.

Patrol Extinguishes Two Small Brush Fires

The Eastern Lane Fire Patrol Assn. extinguished two fires Tuesday afternoon, one on Rattlesnake Road near Trent, and the other in the Hoselton logging operation on Finn Creek, near Vida.

The Finn Creek fire burned about one-eighth acre of logging slash, but did most damage to a caterpillar tractor, a spark from which is believed to have caused it. Men from the March Logging Co. helped extinguish the blaze, which was discovered about 4 p.m. and put out about 7 p.m.

Cause of the Rattlesnake Road blaze was not determined immediately, but was believed to have been a smoker. The blaze covered a quarter acre of brush, but quick-acting firefighters kept it from a nearby timbered area.

Florence Resident To Enter Plea on Charge

The 29-year-old truck driver was arrested by county officers July 19. He is being held in the county jail.

without authority. He was taken into custody by county officers and is being held at the county jail.
