Savage Aims Foreign Affairs

"Foreign policy does come very close to all of us and it is serious business," declared Dr. Carlton R. Savage Tuesday night in an address given on the university campus.

Dr. Savage, an assistant to Secretary of States James Byrnes, traced the development of United States foreign policy, contrasting our refusal to join the League of Nations after the first world war with our present leading role in United Nations.

He pointed out that United Nations can be successful only if the members remain eternally vigilant since our only chance of survival in the atomic age is through cooperation to prevent aggression.

Dr. Savage declared that the peoples of Europe have been too hard-hit during the war to be able to take their full share of leadership in the development of world cooperation.

"We have not had our way in the Paris Conference," declared Dr. Savage, "but no nation gets its way in a free international gathering."

Home Service Secretary Reports Red Cross Activity

The ever-increasing activity of the American Red Cross and its extensive program for servicemen and their families as well as to veterans and their dependents, is most evident in the Lane County Chapter, reports Mrs. John Scheidt, home service secretary.

The local chapter assists with communications between the servicemen and their families when common means of communication are not available or effective, or when the situation is of such a nature that a personal visit or interview by the Red Cross is desirable.

The American Red Cross supplies information concerning government regulations and legislation affecting service and ex-servicemen and their families. It also supplies information pertaining to International Red Cross and its regulations.

During the month of July alone the local chapter forwarded 117 reports to assist the military or naval authorities in obtaining social history material required for medical treatment and by making reports on home conditions needed by commanding officers in deciding questions of health and welfare, discharge, furlough and clemency.

The American Red Cross is set up to provide financial assistance for basic maintenance on the basis of need to dependents of servicemen and disabled ex-servicemen and their dependents during the period when the application or claim for government benefits—incl. family allowances, allotments, pensions and insurance benefits—is pending. The American Red Cross policy of financial assistance also covers special non-
