By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thomas E. Logues, Portland, was killed near Grande Ronde when his gun slipped and discharged as he sat on a log.

George Douglas, Salem, was shot through the hip by his own gun and was in the Bend hospital.

Hilton G. Munday, Rt. 1, Corvallis, was shot in the back while hunting with his brother.

L. R. Smith, Eureka, Calif., lost a finger when his gun discharged accidentally when he pulled the trigger believing the gun was unloaded. He was treated at the Bend hospital.

At Mary's Peak, Mrs. Ethel Hand, Rt. 3, Corvallis, was wounded in the hip by a rifle bullet which glanced off an automobile when a rifle belonging to Herb Kerkhart, also of Corvallis, Rt. 3, was charged accidentally. Lee Hodges, Philomath, was wounded slightly by a spent bullet as he worked near the Philomath railroad station. Sheriff C. N. Lilly of Benton County said the bullet may have been from a gun used in target practice.

Honkers' Hoots Hint Winter Near Eugene

Wild squawking in the sky after 9 p. m. Monday night confirmed the calendar's and the weatherman's opinion that winter is nearing Eugene.

Sounding off were large streams of wild geese, passing over the city en route from their summer lodges in Canada to their winter feeding grounds far to the south, perhaps in Central or South America.

Although camouflaged from sight by low-hanging clouds, the geese could be heard clearly, heading in southeasterly direction and possibly following the Willamette River.
