

George Boughton New Director Of Eugene Junior Symphony

Eugene's Junior Symphony Orchestra will resume activity this month, under leadership of its third director in 12 years of existence. George Boughton, violinist, of the University of Oregon school of music, has accepted the invitation of the board to direct the group of junior musicians in the season which will open the week of Oct. 20, and will continue into March.

First director of the orchestra, to whom is given credit for bringing it through difficult early years and into proudfest achievement, was Rex Underwood, who still serves on the board. He was succeeded by Douglas Orme, who carried on successfully while Underwood was on leave of absence, but has resigned.

Boughton joined the staff of the university last year, coming from the south, where formerly he had headed the violin department of the school of music at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas. A native of New York State, he began the study of the violin at the age of eight. Later he entered the Institute of Musical Art, New York City, where he was a student of Leopold Kramer and A. Madeley Richardson.

He accompanied the former to Germany, when Kramer returned to Prague to head the Academy of Music, in order to continue studies with the distinguished teacher. He spent three years in intensive study at Prague, giving a series of concerts in Austria and Sweden before returning to this country.

Junior Symphony
A recital given at the school of music last fall won many friends for the violinist, and led to his appearance as guest soloist with the Eugene Gleemen later in the year. Prior to coming to Eugene, he had spent two years in military service as a teacher of radio. However, he managed to keep up his work with the violin, doing some teaching and also playing performances for the soldiers.

The new director is optimistic concerning the outlook for the junior musical group. "It is too early to make promises," he said, "but with the cooperation of parents, I believe we shall do an excellent job." Services of three persons have been obtained, to assist with the string section of the orchestra. Mrs. Donald Allton will supervise violin; Milton Dieterich, new cello instructor at the school of music, will assist cellists, and Janet Shafer, an advanced student with Boughton, will aid the second violin and viola section. Assistants in other sections of the orchestra are to be named.

Letters will go out this week to schools of the area, inviting musicians of both junior and senior high schools to membership. Try-outs are to be started about Oct. 21. Mrs. Jack Bryan of the symphony board will receive applications, and any boy or girl interested may phone her at 1209-M.

Officers and board members of the Junior Symphony in Eugene are: President, Mrs. C. A. Horton; first vice-president, Carl Johnson; second vice-president, Mrs. William M. Tugman; third vice-president, Rex Underwood; fourth vice-president, Robert D. Horn; secretary, Mrs. N. C. Youth Training Institute to Open

Youth agencies of Eugene and Lane County will open their training institute Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the community center. All adults interested in various agencies and general youth work are invited to participate in the six sessions.

The opening session will include an address on the Principles of Group Work presented by Mrs. Dorette Lemon, program director for business girls of the city and a member of the YWCA staff. Mrs. Lemon is a graduate of the Boston school of social work of New York City; has been affiliated with youth work of the Camp Fire Girls.

Mrs. Mary Grubb, young people's worker of the Congregational Church, is in charge of the music program.

Following the opening hour, workshops will consist of dramatics and outdoor activities during which time all participants of the institute will participate in one of the three workshops. Mrs. Grace Sikes, dramatics coach, play writer, and a member of the Very Little Theatre, will be in charge.

Mrs. Helene Hoffman, director of the YWCA, will handle the crafts program.

Outdoor workshop will be under the direction of Mrs. Marjorie Kelley, program director for the Girl Scout council. Mrs. Kelley has taken graduate work at Columbia University and has been active in camp directing and is now taking work for her master's degree in the physical education department of the University of Oregon.

Earl Britton, recent probation officer, will assist in this program and will bring with him experience from the fields of Boy Scouting and 4-H Club work.

Mary Alice Lawson of the University of Oregon will direct the folk dance and games program. Cecil Warner, working on a master's degree at the University of Oregon and of the Northwest Christian College, will direct recreational games. The Rev. Wesley G. Nicholson, pastor of the First Congregational Church and district chairman for the Boy Scouts, at the second session of the group, will present the address, "The Challenge of Volunteer Leadership."

The institute will begin Monday, Oct. 14, and be held each Monday and Thursday until Oct. 31.
