Water Board To View Power Supply Problem

The Eugene Water Board will consider installation of a new hydroelectric unit at the Leaburg power plant and may discuss the eventual purchase of a new unit for the Watterville plant at its meeting here at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

When the Leaburg plant was built with one hydro generator in 1930, room was left for one more unit. Installation of a new generator at Watterville, however, will necessitate construction of an entirely new plant. The Watterville power plant now contains two hydro units, which would be used as standby if the new plant is built.

Ray Boals, city water board superintendent, said orders are being taken for generators with delivery in about 24 months. One new unit for Leaburg would cost approximately $500,000.

May Buy Diesel Plant

In a move eventually to provide increased power facilities, water board members will study the prices of a new diesel engine, possibly to be ordered for use in the steam plant on Eighth Ave. They also expect to have a statement from Bonneville Power Administration on plans for a new power line to Eugene. Boals said BPA's present line to the city, carrying 115,000 volts, but the new proposed line, if built, would transmit about 230,000 volts.

At present the kilowatt capacity of Eugene's power plants is 34,500, but a peak load of 25,000 kilowatts is expected this winter. Meanwhile, water board members are considering potential population growth, and the fact that Eugene would be short on power if one of the plants became inoperative a year or two from now.

Power facilities now available include 3000 kilowatts from Watterville, 7000 from Leaburg, 14,500 from the steam plant and about 10,000 from Bonneville.

Religious Week On Oregon Campus

A free discussion of religion is guaranteed during the University of Oregon "Religious Emphasis" week, Oct. 27 to Nov. 1, now that "Skeptic's Hour" has been added to the program, said Martha Thorsland, Eugene, student chairman of the event.

One of the guest speakers will be present one hour each day of the week to answer questions and discuss religion with students. Reports from other schools which have included this hour in their program, indicate a lively and educational discussion between students and the speaker.

George Nahas, French youth leader traveling in the United States under the auspices of the World Student Service Fund, will appear this year. Decorated six times by four Allied nations, Nahas carried on extensive underground activities in France during the occupation.
 Thirteen nationally-known speakers are scheduled to appear this year, to hold forums, fire-sides, lectures, and student assembly. Opening event is a mass meeting in McArthur Court Sunday night, Oct. 27.

Men Given Chance For Fitness Course

An adult class for men in physical fitness and recreational activities is offered on the University of Oregon campus every Thursday evening by Glenn F. Sweeney, veteran's advisor and assistant in the dean of men's office.

The class, sponsored by the extension division, gives Eugene business men an opportunity for exercise, games of competition and includes a period of instruction stressing the particular activity of the week.

Activities of future class meetings will depend on the number of men in attendance, Sweeney explained. Registration is still open for those interested. Sweeney pointed out that swimming, square

Speech Meetings Set By Forensic Group

The Willamette Valley Institute Nov. 9 is to be the first speech meeting to be sponsored by the Intercollegiate Forensic Association of Oregon, it was announced Saturday by Kurt E. Montgomery, assistant professor of speech and dramatic arts at the University of Oregon.

The meeting will serve as a practice session for speakers intending to join later contests. Debates, impromptu and extemporaneous speeches and oratory will be featured in the two sections of the institute; one with eight colleges of the state attending and another comprised of high schools throughout the state.

First Contest Set

During the week of December 13, the association will sponsor the first contest of the year, an extemporaneous speaking contest to be held at Pacific University. One man and one woman will be entered from each of the schools of the association. The subject will be decided at the institute the week previous, Montgomery explained.

An after-dinner speaking contest is next on the schedule for the association and is set for Linfield College the week of January 17.

The University of Oregon will play host to speakers registered for the Peace Contest to be held the week of February 14, and the winners and runners-up will have their manuscripts sent to the National Peace Contest for consideration.

Contestants may speak on any subject other than peace, when the Old Line Oratorical Contest is staged at Oregon State College March 7. This is the final contest of the year, Montgomery said.

Symposium Teams Select Two Topics

Selections of topics for this year's symposium groups of the University of Oregon have been made, according to Dr. R. D. Clark, assistant professor of speech and dramatic arts and director of the two symposium teams.

The teams will tour the state, speaking before churches, schools, clubs, and fraternal organizations, to bring before the people suggested solutions to two vital problems.

The first group has chosen for its topic, said Dr. Clark, "The Means of Financing Educational Institutions." Herman Kehrl, director of the bureau of municipal research and service in the university, will supply the background for team members when he meets the group Monday, Oct. 14, explaining in his talk the tax program of the state of Oregon.

In conjunction with the second group's topic, "Labor-Management; Government-Public," LeRoy Newland, Eugene designer and builder, will meet with members of this team and speak on "What Management Expects of Labor." His talk has been arranged for Oct. 14.

Students on the two teams expect to be prepared to start their swing around the state soon after the first of the year.

Ballot Measure Program Topic

A pre-election analysis of the "basic school support bill"—pro and con—will take place at the Lane County "town meeting" in the Community Center at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Speakers for the measure, which will come before voters Nov. 5, will be Dr. Carl Huffaker, University of Oregon education professor and for 20 years a student of Oregon education; and Mrs. J. Don Smith, president of the Eugene Parent-Teachers Assn.

Opposing it will be Stanley Stevenson, past president of the Oregon Business and Tax Research League, and Day Bayly, Eugene attorney.

Proponents of the school bill say it will provide additional funds for schools, and especially for the districts which at present have such low assessed valuations that they cannot provide adequate facilities and services for pupils.

A dangerous tax program would follow the plan, the opponents argue. They say it would create a "prior lien" on property, and also cite the already heavy burden on real estate, which they feel would be enlarged.

Members of the Community Center audience will have an opportunity to question the speakers after the formal part of the program.

Town meetings are sponsored by the Eugene American Veterans Committee and KUGN.

Do you see THE VOICE THAT UNNERVED THE NEIGHBORHOOD
 ... OR THE VOICE THAT THRILLED A NATION!
 From a howling baby to a "howling success" is a long road (and often an expensive one) ... whether that success lies in business, a trade, or a profession. For education and professional training take many years, and many dollars ... dollars that most of us find hard to save.
 That's one of the reasons why hundreds of thousands of American families (for three generations) have chosen to buy their baby-needs from Montgomery Ward. Baby-needs ... and children's-needs, too! They've learned that at Wards ... year in, year out ... they get good quality, wide selection, and PRICES THAT SAVE THEM PLENTY!
 Next time, before you buy your youngster's clothes at that expensive specialty shop, COMPARE AT WARDS! Come in ... and check the savings for yourself. (You'll often find identical merchandise, from the same manufacturer, sold by Wards for less.)
 Before you leave, picture your total Ward-savings ... over a 10 or 15-year span ... invested in your child's own future. (An investment your child will thank you for, in years to come!)
