Chamber Makes A Distinction

So far the board of directors of the Eugene Chamber of Commerce has refused to adopt any resolutions in support of the "revolt" at Grants Pass against "stop" orders on construction. They have discussed the matter thoroughly, and they have reached a rather interesting conclusion:

"We will not lend the support of this Chamber to lawlessness in any form. Protests? Yes! We will support the right to protest but not defiance of law."

This distinction between "defiance of law" and "protest" is quite important. Admittedly the administration of CPA and other government control agencies has been very bad. But CPA acts under laws of Congress and the Chamber's policy suggests obedience under protest. In other words the remedy is to get Congress to change the law.

We think the position of the Chamber is very sound. Of course, the question might be asked:

"At what point does protest run over into lawlessness and revolt?"

There is always a shadowland between the two. In fact, we think it is overstatement to call the Grants Pass affair actual revolt. People did get together to defy law and refuse compliance, and if this type of action were to spread it would become revolt. But, it had the atmosphere of dramatics rather than revolt. Federal agents still go in and out of Grants Pass without molestation. The alleged "crimes" will eventually be passed upon by courts. (And it is our hope that the courts will recognize the defiance as dramatized protest rather than serious revolt.)

"But what about the effigy hangings of Bonneville officials in 'darkest Florence'?"

There was absolutely no defiance of law at Florence. There is no law which prohibits the lampooning assault on public officials—for their PUBLIC acts (or failures to act). There is a marked difference between what happened at Florence and what happened at Grants Pass. At Florence no law of the land was involved; at Grants Pass, it is the law and not just the public servants that is attacked.

"How is the defiance of stop orders at Grants Pass different from bootlegging defiance of prohibition some years back?"

There is no difference. There is an absolute parallel here. True, prohibition was flouted, just as any unworkable law will always be flouted. It would be hard to find any Chamber of Commerce member who could say truthfully that he never violated the prohibition law (just as we suspect it would be hard to find any Chamber of Commerce member or anybody else who would not do a little 'hunching' if he had a building to build under present absurd conditions).

But even under prohibition, good citizens did not go round advocating mass violation of the prohibition laws or seeking to prevent the prosecution of the gangsters and bootleggers. Good citizens do not advocate mass revolt against CPA or OPA. They shout their heads off for repeals and reforms.

The Grants Pass episode is simply dramatic protest, not actual revolt. The famous Cavemen and other characters of the Josephine County metropolis have rung the publicity bell again. They have called attention to a bungle, and we suspect they have had a lot of fun doing it.

The Eugene Chamber has chosen to keep its head and make a very nice distinction by standing clear.

New German Occupation Policy

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—(NEA)—U. S. State Department directives on policy to be carried out in Germany by Generals Joseph T. McNarney and Lucius D. Clay are now being completely revised, and will be announced soon.

Effect of the changes will be to rewrite completely the directive known as IPCOG 1067—the Informal Policy Committee on Germany's General Staff memo No. 1067, approved in April, 1945. General Eisenhower carried these orders into Germany after V-E Day. They laid down the policy which U. S. military government authorities were to follow in the American zone and in the Allied Control Council in Berlin.

IPCOC was disbanded a year ago. It was succeeded by SWNCC—the State-War-Navy Co-ordinating Committee of Assistant Secretaries in those three departments. The job of rewriting 1067 has fallen on SWNCC, under the chairmanship of Assistant Secretary of State John H. Hilldring.

Ten-sixty-seven, as it was known, was originally a negative set of orders. It told what should be done to de-Nazify Germany, do away with Nazi laws, wipe out the German government for a new start, reduce the German war potential.

All those things have now been done in the American zone. In addition, there have been free elections in the three Laender, or states, making up the U. S. occupied area. Democratic governments have been elected from the smallest political unit upward. State constitutions have been drawn up and will soon be submitted to the voters for ratification.

Recent Developments Dictate Change

On top of this, there have been a number of important economic developments in Germany. The four occupying powers have agreed on a standard-of-living level for Germany, based on annual steel production of 5,800,000 tons—about one-fourth of Germany's prewar output.

The U. S. and British zones have been unified—the first step toward making Germany self-sufficient. France and Russia are expected to come into line gradually, thus removing all trade barriers between zones.

Secretary of State James F. Byrnes has made three important declarations on American aims in Europe, changing government policy as the situation in Germany has developed.

The first of these was a statement of last Dec. 12 on Germany's peacetime economy. It set forth these four principal objectives: Increase the export of coal to liberated areas. Settle the German reparations question. Set up uniform and centralized control of German finance, transport, and communications for all four of the occupied zones. Prevent mass starvation in Germany during the past winter.

Other developments which have made necessary the changing of orders given the U. S. military government authorities in Germany include two recent speeches by Secretary Byrnes.

Byrnes' Speeches, Outmade No. 1067.

Before 150 German officials at Stuttgart on Sept. 6, Byrnes proposed that Germany be reunited under a provisional central government with which a peace treaty could be negotiated.

On Oct. 3, before the American Club in Paris, Byrnes made another speech on U. S. foreign policy in which he brought forward again his proposal for a four-power treaty guaranteeing the disarmament of Germany for 40 years.

These are the public declarations which have made necessary a revision of IPCOG 1067. Not made public are a number of cables from the State Department to General McNarney, directing changes in policy as new situations have arisen.

All such orders are now being reviewed. A completely rewritten order to the Army in Europe will result, to govern the American zones until the next phase of developing a peaceful German nation is called for.

Ancient Tirza Thought Found

JERUSALEM—(AP)—French archeologists have announced the discovery of traces of a city dating back possibly 5000 years in north-central Palestine.

The site of the city, found 20 feet below the desert after three months of careful probing by the French Biblical and Archeological School under the direction of Father De Vaux, is so situated that discoverers said it might be the old Israelite capital of Tirza. However, Father De Vaux cautioned against "prematurely placing importance on the discovery."

Relics taken from the excavations, which will be extended next year, include two dozen baskets of broken pottery, nearly 100 pieces of flint such as arrowheads, and several pieces of bronze tools.

Tirza, first capital of Israel, went out of existence about 900 B.C., when a new capital was built at Samaria.

The location, on the ancient Roman road between Beisan and Nablus, is the traditional site of Tirza, which theologians believe Abraham first approached on his arrival in the eastern Mediterranean from Mesopotamia.
