Willamette Locks Resume 7-Day Work

OREGON CITY — (U.P.) — Col. O. E. Walsh, district Army engineer, has ordered the locks at Willamette Falls here restored to seven-days a week operation in an effort to relieve the glut of logs in the upper basin waiting to move downstream.

A presidential order had placed the locks on a five-day operation as part of the economy order to reduce federal expenses.

A total of 225 lockages were reported awaiting passage through the canal downstream, nearly all of them being log rafts what virtually choke the river from bank to bank for several miles upstream.

Infant to Rule Homecoming

CORVALLIS — (AP) — Five "Solomons" were selected Thursday to name the infant who—thanks to the veteran student influx—will supersede the usual "Homecoming Queen" at Oregon State College this year.

Sixty babies of OSC ex-GI students are entered in the race for a tiny "king" or "queen" to preside over Saturday's Homecoming game with the University of Oregon in place of the traditional co-ed queen.

With 120 pround parents watching, the judges are in for a tougher task than the old-fashioned contest ever caused. The five are President A. L. Strand; Dean of Women Mrs. Buena Maris Mockmore; Mrs. Catherine Read, director of college nursery schools; Dr. Robert W. Mardum, Corvallis physician; and Ernest Haycox, Portland author.

Scouters Name Men To Pick Candidates

A nominating committee to select a list of candidates for district offices was announced this week by W. G. Nicholson, chairman of the Lane district Boy Scout committee.

Members of the nominating committee are Warne Empey, Junction City, chairman; Spencer Alexander, Springfield; J. D. Lambert, Bethel; L. W. Wheeler, Trent; Clarence Hines, L. S. McCready, and Edward Eberdt, Eugene.

A program of assisting communities in providing better scouting arrangements was recommended Tuesday night by Ralph Kindler, representing the council president's special committee to study the need for new districts. The program will substitute for the new district plans.

District committee members at the meeting also heard a report by Richard E. Walstrom that the district had a net gain of 74 boys in November.

It was announced that Harold Shearer, field scout executive, will appoint men to inspect Scout units during the week of Dec. 8 to 14 on behalf of the Scout Roundup program.

Facilities have been loaned by the University of Oregon for Scout swimming and lifesaving classes. Milo Marlatt will serve as instructor.

Washington Columnist Isn't Sure About Paul Bunyan---

Lumber Spokesman's Size Causes Disbelief

By FREDERICK C. OTHMAN

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— I am in position today to discourse authoritatively on fir-lined bathtubs, the art of sprouting hair on bowling balls, and how to turn the mighty oak into high-test alcohol.

The biggest fellow I ever did see hove into town, intent on mowing down Housing Administrator Wyatt. I asked him where was Babe, his blue ox?

He denied ownership. He also denied that he was Paul Bunyan. He said he was Arthur W. Priaulx of Portland, Ore., and the West Coast Lumbermen's Assn. The membership, he said, considers Wyatt a menace. (Wyatt has heard this before; not true, he says.)

So the giant in the broad-brimmed hat got to talking about the wonders of the Northwest, insisting at intervals that his name was not either Bunyan. All I can say is, read on:

Improved Bathtubs

"Why sure," he said, "we make fir-lined bathtubs. Better than steel and prettier. We take a sheet of wood and we force out the resin. Then we force in liquid plastics and stamp her down in the shape of a tub and compress her and what have we got? The finest bathtub man ever sat in. With a beautiful polish, a warm feel on a fellow's back, and proof against anything. Kind of a cross between marble and steel."

I made the mistake of mentioning his head of black hair, thicker than an Oregon beaver's.

"Easy," he said. "There is a fellow, who grows rabbits at St. Helens, Ore., name of Paul Brendenfels. Not Bunyan. Brendenfels. He mixed up a goo with sulfa and stuff to grow more hair on his rabbits. Seemed to work fine.

"He began to think, being bald as an eagle himself, that maybe it would work on him. It did. He rubbed it on and pretty soon he had a scalp of fine yellow hair, he being a blond originally. So the word got out and he began getting orders. That was last spring.

"Now he's a big business man. He's done a $400,000 gross already. Almost everybody in St. Helens is working for him, making hair tonic."

I wondered if he guaranteed it.

"Guarantee it!" exclaimed my visitor. "Why with every bottle he sends along another smaller bottle of brilliantine so his customers can keep their new hair out of their eyes."

Note on Ellsworth

Changing the subject was difficult ,but I finally managed it by asking about our mutual friend, Congressman Harris Ellsworth of Roseburg, Ore.

"Only 70 per cent of the voters voted for his re-election," my caller said, "but Harris is not downhearted. He is working on the other 30 per cent. He's also working on the biggest pile of sawdust in the world."

"Huh?" I said.

"Yep," he reported, "the biggest pile of sawdust any place is up near Eugene, Ore. So Harris sparkplugged the deal to build one of those sawdust plants like the Germans had, only bigger and better. It's all built. Production starts the first of January.

"The sawdust goes in one end and out of the other comes 2,200,000 gallons of 190 proof alcohol a year. And other things like dyes and molasses and plastics come out, too."

I wondered if that was all.

"I almost forgot the aspirin tablets," said the man who said his name wasn't Bunyan.
