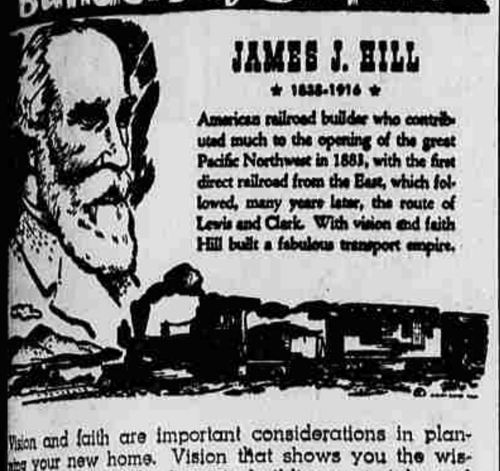
Builders of Empire



JAMES J. HILL
★ 1838-1916 ★

American railroad builder who contributed much to the opening of the great Pacific Northwest in 1883, with the first direct railroad from the East, which followed, many years later, the route of Lewis and Clark. With vision and faith Hill built a fabulous transport empire.

Vision and faith are important considerations in planning your new home. Vision that shows you the wisdom of using only the finest in building materials, and faith in the concern from which you purchase them. You'll find a great deal of satisfaction in bringing your building material problems to us. Come in today!
