Balkanization' een for India

BY J. M. ROBERTS, JR.

ndia, through the inability of people to resolve their differ- es and through the efforts of British to maintain economic where they are unable to con- ue political control, appears on verge of Balkanization.

First reaction among observers United Nations headquarters to latest British proposal was ap- hensive not because of the ms of the plan itself which ems about as logical as could be pected now, but because of the herent factors which brought it out.

o Three Parts

The British propose, and the In- n leaders seem to accept, divi- n of the great subcontinent into ee parts, all of them subdivided turn by bitterly opposed re- ious, racial and political sects. The Pakistan for which the Mos- s have fought and which they m about to get—as a British minion for the time but ulti- ately as a separate country if r wish—is in reality two coun- es with no physical connection. The Hindustan with which no has been able to persuade the slem to join includes major por- ns of British India. But the larg- Hindu city, for instance, is Cal- tta, whose trade depends heavily on the back country of Bengal, hich would go to the Moslems.

tentates Have Choice

Almost surrounded by the Mos- n and Hindu areas are the ndependent states, whose potentates e expected to put up a bitter ght for retention of their priv- ges. Under the plan they can main under the British crown or cide, along with Pakistan and ndustan when the British finally ll out in July 1948, to federate individually to join one of the ger segments.

Thus, for the interim between w and British withdrawal, we ve the prospect of a dominion of kistan, a dominion of Hindu- n, and a group of princely ates.

If this fails to work, if India comes three or even two na- alistic states, with a continuing ss-fire between her divergent oples, she will become a vacuum the Orient, destined to attract of the opposing world forces hich have made the Balkans the ckpit of Europe.

Campus Group Pays Old Debt

A roaring fire on a porcelain platter June 6 will mean the end of indebtedness for 60 young men attending the University of Oregon.

Consumed by blaze will be the mortgage on Campbell Club, 1335 Alder Street, signifying that the club is owned by the Student's Cooperative Association. It took 12 years.

When the cooperative movement was started in 1935, the group had two main objectives. First was to gain an economic advantage during the depression, and secondly, they wanted to maintain high academic standards.

Expenses are cut by every man in the house performing four hours of duty a week. All business transacted by the Student's Cooperative Association must have a majority vote of the members.

The co-op fulfiled its second objective fall and winter terms of the school year by winning the Burt Brown Baker scholarship cup for the third time to take permanent possession of the award.

Inspired by the success of Campbell Club, Oregon women established University House, Hilyard House, and Highland House. Two other men's organizations, Kirkwood Co-op and Canard Club, have been formed.
