A-26, Trainer Crash Fatal to Five Aboard

MANCHESTER, N. H., (AP) — At least five persons were killed Tuesday night when an Army A-26 bomber and an advanced trainer collided in the air and plummeted to the ground in widely separated areas.

A Greater Army Air Field official said the bomber, carrying three army personnel, was enroute from Andrews Field, Maryland, and was within one mile of Granier, its destination, when it collided.

He said the second plane was out of the Bedford Army airport on a routine training flight, but could not say how many were aboard, adding the plane could carry as many as seven "but there were probably only two pilots aboard."

The Army public relations officer said "All men in the planes were killed."

Eyewitnesses said the tail of the trainer was sheared off and that it lost a wing before it crashed to the ground.

It narrowly missed several homes in a residential section and crashed into a garage, setting it afire. The heavier ship came to the ground near busy Route 101, which crosses the state.
