the city that the county could no longer handle its prisoners after July 1, 1948. The letter stated that the county had reconsidered its original stand because it was understood that Springfield is considering means of acquiring its own jail facilities.

In other action the Council:

- 1—Turned a petition requesting the paving and curbing of G St. from Twelfth to Fourteenth St. over to the council's street committee.
- 2—Authorized a license to operate the Springfield Garbage Service to James C. Cook. Cook has purchased the business which has been operated by George J. Yost.
- 3—Authorized the purchase of two new $52 sirens for the city traffic vehicles.
- 4—Accepted a bid of $44.25 from the West M St. Body and Fender Shop to repair the city's police car which was involved in a minor accident recently.
- 5—Passed an ordinance establishing procedure to be followed at council meetings. On a roll call vote Councilman Gilbert Shoush, Ward Six, voted against the ordinance because he said that 12 hours notice for a special meeting of the council was not long enough. He also objected to the stipulation that three members of the council could call a special meeting.
- 6—The council requested Mountain States Power Co. to install three fire hydrants in the Mohawk addition to the city.

Water Plan Under Study

water district, such as River road, served by the Eugene system. Dr. Dow said such rates would, in the committee's estimation, be too high for Springfield which would use a much greater volume of water.

The council, after hearing a letter written by Oscar Shockley, accepted his resignation from the city planning commission.

Shockley, who was president of the planners, said his resignation was submitted "in view of recent events" and because of pressing business problems.

Mayor Claude Gerlach submitted the name of William S. Fort as an appointment to the planning commission and the council accepted. Fort was formerly city attorney here and was instrumental in the formation of the new comprehensive zoning plan for the city.

The council had final readings and passed the following ordinances:

- 1—Granting an exclusive franchise to the Oregon Motor Stages for operating bus lines in the city until June 30, 1954. The bus company pays the city $200 a year for the rights and a sum of $50 for any additional routes over and above the present number.
- 2—An ordinance licensing taxi services, requiring a license of $100 per year plus $10 for each taxicab. The ordinance also stipulates that there shall be no more than one taxicab for each 1200 population.
- 3—The area in the eastern part of the city including the new Maple school was included in Ward Six.
- 4—Two ordinances, one waiving the city's rights to a portion of Crest Lane, and one giving up rights to a portion of Park Lane. Both streets are on Emerald Heights and the vacated portion amounts to about one block in each case.

The council accepted the city engineer's report on the large sewer job in the eastern part of the city, constructed by Marquis and McKy and ordered the attorney to begin preparations for an assessment ordinance. The job, including the engineer's fees amounts to $23,616 of which nearly $5000 will be assumed by the city for extension of main sewer trunk line. Property owners will be assessed slightly over $18,000.

A group of local business men, with S. W. Alexander as their spokesman, presented a letter with 90 businessmen's signatures to the council. The letter requested that the city retain the manager-council form of government and stipulated that the manager be given a "proper" opportunity to "prove his worth."

The Mayor read a letter to the council from County Sheriff C. A. Swartz which declared that the county will cooperate, insofar as possible under the crowded conditions, to take care of this city's prisoners until Springfield can provide its own facilities.

Local Men Back Lease Proposal

Representatives of McKenzie River fishing and development interests were in Portland Tuesday to present the State Game Commission with the Eugene Water Board's counter proposal on a state plan to lease land near Leaburg Dam for fish propagation purposes.

The Water Board proposal was adopted Monday night at a regular meeting. It offered the state a 20-year lease on the land on which the game commission has proposed construction of holding ponds to allow fingerling fish to mature to legal size.

The latest of a series of proposals, the present one contains an emergency recapture clause which would enable the city to make use of the hitherto undeveloped land if necessary. The commission has been informed that the water board has no reason to believe that it will need the property in the foreseeable future but feels it must protect its interest in the Leaburg site.

Carl Baker, one of the group planning to go to Portland, said he believed the Water Board proposal "very fair." Others, including Mert Foltz, Bill Sheppard, and Carroll Adams, expressed favorable opinions of the proposal.

Baker said the commission has tentatively budgeted $80,000 for the development of the brooding ponds, which would be across the river from the present hatchery site. He said about $24,000 of this would be used to construct the ponds and the remainder would finance the expanded restocking program.
