United Nations Development As Tool for Peace Discussed

Can the United Nations be developed into a potent and effective instrument for permanent peace?

Dr. C. P. Schleicher, professor of political science at the University of Oregon, discussed this problem before members of the Rotary Club Tuesday noon, declaring first that the question assumes that the UN is not now an effective and potent source.

No Cure Yet

"The state of the world is such today that few men would argue that the UN has so far met the test in achieving its aims of peace and security," Dr. Schleicher pointed out. "People everywhere feel at least as insecure as they did in the years preceding the war."

Basic questions posed by the speaker were: 1) Does the difficulty today lie in the realm of international institutions? If it does, there is a possibility that, unless we destroy the opportunity, the UN may develop into an effective instrument for world peace;

2) Are the real differences between the states so fundamental that they necessarily preclude either major changes in international institutions, or the successful functioning of these institutions, even if they should be brought into existence?

"If your answer to the second question is yes, while you may favor strengthening the UN, you can get small comfort from the possibility that it will be of major assistance in preventing the resort to physical force," the speaker asserted.

Not Perfection

Dr. Schleicher declared that an adequate UN would not mean perfection, but would mean that the chances of international war would be considerably less than they are today.

Those who argue for patience concerning the UN point out that the UN is only two years old, and that considerable groundwork has been laid in many fields, the speaker said. The force of their arguments cannot be denied, he believes, but still a real fear persists.

Roosevelt Plan

Going back to Dumbarton Oaks and San Francisco, Dr. Schleicher asserted that President Roosevelt set the tone for establishment of UN in June, 1944, when he said: "We are not thinking of a super-state with its own police force and other paraphernalia of coercive power."

"Much has been made of the differences between the League of Nations and UN, and too little of the similarities," Dr. Schleicher declared, pointing out that both provided mechanisms for cooperation, and asking if the mechanisms of the UN provide adequate assurance that this cooperation will have a fair chance of developing.

Not in Effect

"When I agreed that the UN is now inadequate I should have pointed out some important provisions of the charter that have never been implemented," the speaker said.

He mentioned that military and non-military sanctions have had no attention, since San Francisco was given to economic or other sanctions and to mutual assistance among states.

The closely related problem of armament limitations was also discussed, as well as the development of the assembly in matters of primary Security Council responsibility.

Veto Issue

"The most dramatic and poorly understood aspect of UN is the veto, Dr. Schleicher stated. "Some people think abolition of the veto will cure all UN troubles, but in

Negro Writer Under Deportation Order

NEW YORK — (AP) — The arrest on a deportation warrant of Claudia Jones, Negro woman writer and secretary to the national Women's Commission of the Communist party in the United States, was announced Tuesday.

She is charged with being an alien in the United States in violation of law in that she advocates and teaches the overthrow of the government by force.

She was arrested Monday night at her Manhattan home by officers of the immigration service and the FBI, and was removed to Ellis Island to be held in custody pending release on $1000 bond.

W. F. Watkins, district director of immigration and naturalization, gave her name as Claudia Vera Scholnick. She was born in Trinidad, British West Indies, Feb. 21, 1915, and arrived in New York Feb. 9, 1924, aboard the steamer Voltaire.

Teachers Group Supports Incumbent

Mrs. Lucille Klinge has been endorsed by the executive committee of the County Teachers Association for reelection as county school superintendent.

At a meeting Monday night, the group urged that she run for the office next fall. Mrs. Klinge had said previously that she was undecided as to whether she would file for reelection.

The committee also discussed possible changes in the teachers' wage scale, which were described as an attempt to meet the increased cost of living. The group endorsed a proposal to secure 100 per cent membership in local, state and national teachers organizations.
