Desai, the Moralist, Set To Revamp 250 Million Indians
 BOMBAY —(AP)— There is a Hindu named Morarji Desai here who has started a 20-year plan to clean up the morals of 25,000,000 people.
 Morarji is a non-drinker. He is a non-smoker. He is a vegetarian. He is also the home minister of Bombay province, whose population is nearly one-fifth that of the United States.
 He is the boss of the police, the film censor board and a brief case full of other portfolios.

 He has started already taking liquor away from his 25,000,000 constituents. The province has three "dry days" a week now. On April 1, 1950, total prohibition goes into effect.
Gambling Forbidden
 Gambling of all kinds will be illegal. Thew orid's oldest profession will be extinct because Morarji's laws will close Bombay's red light districts tight.
 Dancing "after 10 or 11 p.m." in hotels, clubs and other public places will be forbidden.
 "People must have healthy minds," Morarji said. "To have healthy minds, they must have healthy bodies. They must get plenty of sleep."
Hollywood
 Even Hollywood's movie producers are taking a scrubbing in Morarji's moral washing machine. He says he wants to eliminate everything that might "arouse the people's passions." He thinks that a bathtub full of Paulette Goddard or Dorothy Lamour or any other curvaceous actress might do just that. So the movie censors wash out the bathtub and shower scenes.
 Passionate kissing falls into the same category.
Liquor Scenes Out
 Liquor is giving the foreign movie distributors their biggest headache so far. For a while the censor board permitted the presence of a bar or a bottle in a film, although the act of taking a drink has been taboo for nearly a year. You'd see an actor pour a drink. He'd take hold of the full glass, start raising it to his mouth. But it never got there. The censor got there first. Down came the glass empty without ever reaching the lips.
Conditions
 But now even the presence of a bar or bottles in a scene is out unless "cutting the scene would destroy the continuity of the story" or unless the scene shows the "evils of drink."
 Murders, marital infidelity, "sordid" films and even "shoot-em-up" westerns are on Morarji's black list.

Lonely German Women Attract Mostly Crooks
 BERLIN —(AP)—One of the biggest racketeers in Germany is preying upon this country's love-hungry women.
 The chief racketeers are marriage swindlers, burglars and thieves.
 The chief victims are the thousands of women who advertise in the newspapers seeking marriage.
 The easiest pickings are in Berlin, where Germany's unbalanced ratio of women to men is about the highest. Berlin has 146.4 women to each 100 men, compared to a country-wide average of 124.8 to 100.
 War losses and the continued confinement of prisoners of war abroad have caused this imbalance. The disparity is especially high in the normal marriageable age brackets.
 When a woman advertises her "heiratswunsch" (marriage wish) for a man, she usually lists, in addition to her physical attributes, her economic assets.
 In this blasted, wrecked, lodgings-short city, it certainly is an asset for a woman to have "an attractive apartment—in which I feel very lonely." It helps, too, to be able to say that "on my suburban farm I have chickens and livestock."
 But it helps the thieves and confidence men, too. It helps a burglar, scanning the marriage offers, to learn that "Frau M. attractive blonde widow, is at home only from 6 p.m. to 7 a.m."
 They also are interested in "Fraulein S." who dists among her dowry assets "jewels and valuables" and obligingly gives her address.
 Berlin police, battling an increasing crime rate, are pleading with the marriage candidates to be somewhat more discreet and less gullible and to "stop inviting the burglars."
