From where I sit . . . by Joe Marsh

They let the Wives in!

The ex-GFs of our town entered their wives the other night at one of their "feeds" of ham-burger sandwiches and ice cold beer. (The girls had hinted that they'd like to see what went on when their husbands got together.) Being wary, the boys provided chicken sandwiches and cake and beer—for those wives who might have other tastes. But though they were grateful for the choice, most of the wives agreed that ham-burger sandwiches and beer were a mighty pleasant combination.

Pied Piper Now Available

LONDON (U.P.)—Want a Pied Piper?

Britain's got one for export. John Heywood, stocky, fair-haired, 48-year-old destroyer of rodents, claims to be a real-life version of the legendary piper who lured the rats and children of Hamelin to their doom back in 1284.

He has invented a puny, wooden flute whose notes, he says, are irresistible to rats. (It doesn't work with kids, though.)

Like the Hamelin flutists, Mr. Heywood is a man of ambition: He wants to go to America and protect dockside Marshall Plan cargoes from devouring rodents. And get paid for it, of course.

Thursday night he got a reply from the U. S. embassy in London, to which he wrote from his home at Corby, Northamptonshire, advising him to offer his invention to the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service of the Department of Interior, in Chicago.

But the big moment for Mr. Heywood, who spent three years perfecting his flute, came Wednesday when he revealed the instrument's "secret" in a British Broadcasting Corporation radio interview.

"My flute," he said, "has sex-appeal."

Night after night, he reported, he listened to rat love-calls in deserted stables and dank sewers until he got exactly the right pitch.

When the eager rodents responded to his flute, he slaughters them with a club, his bare hands, or, if there are too many, a poison concocted from herbs. Dusk is the best time.

The biggest slaughter in one night, he said, was 1,147, in North Wales.

Trans-Jordan King Announces Stand

CAIRO (U.P.)—King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan said Thursday that the Arabs would reject any proposal for a Holy Land settlement that failed to give them sovereignty over Palestine.

Abdullah, the strong man of the Arab world whose capital became headquarters of the fight against the Jews, gave his views on a Palestine settlement at a press conference.

He flew here Tuesday to visit King Farouk of Egypt. His pronouncement on the possibility of permanent peace in Palestine gave the visit the flavor of a high Arab strategy conference.
