

Flood Relief Still Good

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Agriculture Department said Wednesday it will consider additional payments to Columbia River farmers who wish to plan special drainage, seeding or other techniques because of damage from the recent flood.

The time for approving such payments has gone by, but the department said it still will consider them. They are made by the production and marketing administration if farmers promise to initiate certain soil improvement measures.

Farms in 50 counties of Washington, Oregon and Idaho were affected by the flood, with at least three types of farming in jeopardy, the department said. These are irrigated grain farms in the Kootenai Valley of Idaho; a large dairy farming area west of Portland; and the Okanogan Valley area in Washington, where entire orchards were destroyed.

Researcher Says Plastics Have Limitations

PITTSBURGH — (AP) — Dr. G. F. D. Alelio, assistant director of research for Koppers Co., Inc., would like to picture the plastic dream bubble most people have blown from their imagination.

Dr. Alelio said that although output has grown six-fold in the past few years, the life of America never will be completely dependent on plastics.

He said steel, wood, glass and other "basic" materials would continue to "hold their own."

Dr. Alelio said plastics-making is not easy and that extensive research to make new kinds of plastics.

"Plastics aren't made, as many people believe, by throwing together handfuls of air, water and seaweed," Dr. Alelio commented.
