(Story on Page 1)

Labor Cost Study Results Reported

Labor costs involved in putting a house together in Eugene are neither the highest nor the lowest in the nation, but about half way in between.

One hour's wages for a bricklayer, a carpenter, an electrician, a painter, plasterer, plumber and a building laborer would total $14.60 in Eugene.

One hour of work by each of the seven tradesmen would cost $15.45 in Phoenix, Arizona, the highest in the West. It would cost $18.875 in Newark, N.J., however, and a low of $11.40 in Charlotte, N.C.

Phoenix Highest
According to a Department of Labor survey, the labor cost of building a home in a far western city is highest at Phoenix and lowest at Salt Lake City. The survey, made as of July 1, covered seven selected building trades in 75 cities. It showed far western labor costs were about midway between the highest and lowest for the country.

Wage scales for the seven craftsmen in Eugene are: bricklayers, $2.50; carpenters, $1.95; electricians, $2; painters, $1.87½; plasterers, $2.50; plumbers, $2.25; and building laborers, $1.52½.

Other western cities covered by the report ranked in this order after Phoenix:

San Francisco, $15.398 for one hour of work by the seven tradesmen; Seattle, $15.29; Los Angeles $15.163; Portland, $14.55; Spokane $14.55; Denver, $14.41; and Salt Lake City, $13.35.

The survey showed the highest hourly wage for bricklayers in the West was $3 at Phoenix and the lowest $2.25 at Spokane and Salt Lake. This compared with the national high of $3.20 at New York and the low of $1.75 at Charleston, S.C.

Similar information for the other trades surveyed included:

Carpenters—High of $2.16 at San Francisco and low of $1.825 at Salt Lake; national high $2.90 at Newark and low $1.50 at Charleston, Charlotte and Portland, Me.

Plumbers—$2.50 at Los Angeles, Seattle and Spokane, down to $2 at Salt Lake; national high $3 at New York, low $1.75 at York, Pa.

Building laborers—$1.665 at Seattle down to $1.275 at Salt Lake; national high $2.25 at Newark, low 75 cents at Charleston and Jacksonville, Fla.

Cost of hiring the seven tradesmen in Portland was $14.55, a nickel cheaper than in Eugene. A

Woman Sues Doctors Alleging Negligence

A $30,000 suit for damages was filed in the county courthouse Saturday by Paula Milne alleging "negligence" in the performance of an abdominal operation by two local doctors.

Defendants named are Drs. William H. Chapman and H. E. Lamb who, the plaintiff claims, performed and abdominal operation on her in a local hospital in Aug., 1946, and left a hemostat within her abdomen which was later removed in a second operation in June, 1948.

The plaintiff alleges permanent scarring and injury and extreme pain during the period between the two operations. The amount asked is for general damages.
