Bevin's Message to Commons Cautious—for Good Reason

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The current international tension was strikingly dramatized in a session of the British House of Commons when Ernest Bevin, England's barrel-chested two-fisted foreign secretary—took the floor to tell of the new Allied efforts to pave the way for peace. Bevin spoke to a hushed house. Contrary to his usual catch-as-catch-can delivery of speech, he maneuvered cautiously for words. He was faced with the fact that U.S. Ambassador Bedell Smith had just arrived in Moscow with the plans of the western powers for a verbal approach to Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov instead of the usual austere and inflexible written note. Bevin must be careful not to say anything which would jeopardize the Allied move. And he mustn't commit his government too far or disclose too much. He was even cautious in his keynote:

"I have not given up hope."

Bevin made one startling revelation in stating that Britain is considering a halt in the demobilization of its armed forces because of the tension between Russia and the West. He was, I take it, killing two birds with one stone: He was letting the public in on a momentous secret, and he was tipping the Muscovites that John Bull really means business.

Least there be any doubt about British solidarity in this crisis, at the conclusion of the foreign secretary's statement Wartime Prime Minister Winston Churchill took the floor as leader of the Conservative Party. He pledged the Socialist government the full support of the powerful party which he heads.

Wait Meeting

Bevin's cautiousness is also seen in Washington and Paris. The British, French and American ambassadors in Moscow are expected to meet with Molotov in the immediate future. From inspired speculation we may assume that the ambassadors first will make it clear to the Soviet foreign minister that the democracies take the following stand:

They will not get out of Berlin, period. They will not be high-pressured by Russia into negotiating over the problems of Berlin or over any other broader questions, period. Before there can be any negotiations the Soviet must lift its food blockade of Berlin, exclamation point. Meantime the Western Allies are going straight ahead with their plans for forming a German government for their three zones of occupation. The Soviet Union can join in with its zone—or it can stay out.

Search for Tot Ends in Ditch

PHOENIX —(AP)—An intensive search for two-year-old Wiley Montgomery ended Saturday night with recovery of his body from an irrigation ditch.

The lad, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Montgomery, apparently fell into the ditch Friday evening. Water in the ditch was reduced to the one-foot level and men, more than seven miles before recovering the body.

It has been reported, but not broader European questions with confirmed. The three Allies Moscow if and when the German are prepared to negotiate other question is ironed out. That would, of course, aim at settling the cold war in Europe.

ABOUT CORN

Lyons Weekly News Service

EUGENE, Aug. 2 — Bill, the produce man at the Public Market, said to his new assistant one morning, "Now listen Sam, around here we don't soak corn in water. Now don't give me that stuff about water keeping corn fresh. Water only adds weight, understand?" Sam understood because he nodded his head. This all brings us to the point that the corn at the Public Market is fresh, and tasty but a bit too expensive for freezing. Wait till local corn arrives on the market about the middle of August. The price will be lower then.

GREEN BEANS

A hundred tons of green beans are tossed around the cannery daily. Every market in town has them at a mighty low price. The freezing varieties are Kentucky Wonder, Tendergreen, Full Measure, Stringless Green Pod and Blue Lake. (Who makes up those names?) After cutting and washing carefully, blanch the beans from 3 to 4 minutes. For best results the beans must be cooled immediately by running water or ice water; then drain well and fill the containers 1/2 inch from the top.

When you own the General Electric Home Freezer you eliminate daily shopping trips.

BEETS

You know it's a funny thing how vegetables have personalities. Now take a vegetable like beets... no sense of humor but full of iron and minerals that make your teeth grit when you eat them. Whether you like beets or not they are on the market this week at a low dependable price. (Not at all like temperamental raspberries that shoot up and down the price scale). For freezing, the varieties to buy are Detroit Dark Red or Early Model. Scald the beets 1/2 minute, cool immediately and peel. After blanching and peel the beets from 2 to 3 minutes, drain the water and pack in containers 1/2 inch from the top.

Obviously we were wrong because raspberries are still here and probably will be for the next week or ten days. Sure fooled us!

The second crop of strawberries is on the market. This will positively be the last ones you'll see until next year. Unless, of course, you freeze strawberries. The best varieties for freezing are Corvallis, Marshall, Brightmore, Dorset, Fairfax, and Premier.

Peaches are on the market, but they're imported and mighty expensive. Wait until the first of September when local peaches will be on the market at a very low price.

Apricots are coming in to Eugene like gangbusters. They're cheap and good and will make a pretty refreshing dessert next winter. For freezing, buy Royal, Blenheim, Tilton, Wenatchee or Moorpark.

When you own the General Electric Home Freezer you eliminate those bothersome trips to the food locker.

ODDS AND ENDS IN FRUIT LINE

It seems a couple of weeks ago the Lyons Home Freezing News made a statement to the effect that raspberries would be off the market.

The home freezer you want is the one that will give you the most dependable service. When you compare, you'll agree the G.E. Home Freezer is your best buy at any price. See it tomorrow on display at Lyons.
