Women Better Pilots Than Men According to 85-Year-Old Flier

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(UP)—Ladies, I met a champion of yours. You'd love him for his manly courage. He had the temerity to suggest that you gals are a better hand at steering a piece of machinery than the men. Particularly, guiding those flying machines.

Your hero is James W. Montee of Los Angeles, who claims to be —and doubtless is — the oldest licensed pilot in the world. This bald old-timer with a fringe of gray fuzz around the rim is 85, goin' 86.

Women Better Pilots

"Women make better pilots than men," old Jim allowed, "because they follow the rules better."

And Mr. Montee has another pat on the back for you girls: He says you're also better behind the wheel of a car. He cited the Los Angeles safety records to prove it.

Jim dropped into Washington, by air, of course, to see his son, Harold, who is vice president of Seaboard and Western Airlines.

The old man didn't begin to learn to fly until he was 60 and wasn't granted a private license until 1927. That was the year one Charles A. Lindbergh solved the mysteries of the skies over the Atlantic. They called Lindy the "Lone Eagle."

Crazy Montee

"In those days they called me crazy flyin' machine Montee'," old Jim said with a chuckle.

He did take a few fool chances in the old days with those flappy-winged old Jennies, "but who didn't and I never had me a crack up."

All told, he has soloed 3,063 hours and 11 minutes and drew a dog-eared, leather-bound log book from his pocket to prove it.

He still flies — solo — a couple of hours a week to keep his hand in and generally uses a borrowed Stinson-Voyager. He has no fear of the new-fangled planes on the market and keeps up with all aviation developments.

I Can Make 'em Go'

"If the controls are marked," he said, "I can make 'em go."

He once acted as co-pilot on a four-engined C-54. In all, the little old fellow who's only 5 feet 4 inches high and weighs but 130, has flown 36 types of planes.

He thinks old folks would live longer if they had the good sense to take up flying.

"An hour in the air does me more good than all of the vitamin B pills I could swallow in a whole year," he said, taking a vitamn pill out of his pocket.

Planes Here to Stay

Mr. Montee, who is entitled to a prejudice if anyone is, believes that aviation is here to stay. He does contend, though, that the CAA and other agencies should tighten up on regulations and not let anybody leave the good earth unless he has a two-way radio aboard.

His ambition now is to sit at the controls of a jet plane and blitz through the air at 600 or so miles an hour.

"They won't let me though," he said. "The army owns 'em and civilians can't fly 'em."

His other regret is that his wife won't go up with him.

"She doesn't think I've had enough experience," he said.

Iceland to Have Trees Norwegians Decide

CHICAGO—(UP)— Many trees will grow in Iceland if an experiment conducted by Norwegian geologists proves successful.

American Overseas Air Lines flew 65,000 tree plants from an airport near Andselv, Norway, to Keflavik, Iceland, in a project to develop great pine forests on the ice-bound island.

Once, valuable woodlands thrived on Iceland, geologists believe. But today the land is barren. Haken Bjarnason, forestry director, will try to restore the lost forests with specially-developed pine and fir plants.

Atheists Query Radio Control

WASHINGTON — (UP) — The Federal Communications Commission has been asked whether radio stations have to give atheists a chance to reply every time they broadcast a religious program.

The ruling is sought by the Religious Radio Assn. which includes Protestants, Catholics and Jews.

In a 1946 decision, the commission held that not every organization is of itself entitled to time on the air. But it said that "an organization or idea may be projected into the realm of controversy by virtue of being attacked. The holders of a belief should not be denied the right to answer attacks upon them or their belief solely because they are few in number."

Edward J. Heffron, association president, said members of the Religious Radio Assn. fear that broadcasters might interpret this language to mean they must give atheists an opportunity to reply to every single church program. Such a move, he said, might make broadcasters shy away from religious programs altogether.

Legion 40 and 8 Ponders Status Of Bunyan Chin

TACOMA—(AP)—Did or did not Paul Bunyan wear whiskers?

This is a question now perplexing members of the 40 and 8, the fun making organization of the American Legion.

This outfit is making preparations to entertain the state department Legion convention here next week, and they plan a giant Paul Bunyan and his blue ox "Babe" in the Thursday parade.

When it came to assembling the giant the question of whiskers arose and every available source of information was sought to find out did he or did he not have them. Libraries were searched, lumbermen were queried and a telegram was even sent Bemidji, Minn., where a huge statue of the fabled lumberman stands, but no one seemed to know for a fact.

Of course, it is known that Paul Bunyan shaved at times with one of his huge axes, but did he wear a beard — or how about a moustache?

Forty and 8 members hope to show the world whiskers or no whiskers when the giant appears on the streets—that is, if they themselves find out in time.

Cougar Mentor Grows Weeds

PULLMAN — (AP) — Washington State College is using taxpayers' money to grow weeds and Dr. Lowell Rasmussen thinks it's a good investment.

Rasmussen, the weed specialist at W. S. C. conducted a tour of the college's five-acre experimental weed patch for research men, chemical firm representatives and weed control district supervisors.

He said that despite the formation of about 30 weed control districts in recent years the state's number one farm problem still is weeds.

"We probably will never have one control that will wipe out weeds, either by cultivation or by chemicals," he said in discussing effects of 2,4-D, dinitro and other chemicals. "Like other pests weeds will have to be fought by repeated operations."

He said that selective sprays, such as 2,4-D, have increased control of annual weeds in the crops in recent years. "You hear a lot about noxious, perennial weeds but the annual weeds growing in crops probably cost the farmer more than the noxious weeds," he added.

Visitors were inspecting plots of Canada thistle, the state's chief noxious weed, morning glory and plots showing selective control of annual weeds in several grains and grasses.

New England Also Has Good Neighbor Policy

BOSTON—(UP)— The neighborliness of New Englanders is demonstrated daily by a little drama out beyond the mouth of Boston harbor.

Pilot boats cruise off Boston Light some 10 miles out to sea and their crews usually remain out of touch with land a week at a time.

So each day the crew of an excursion fishing vessel, the S.S. Westport collects newspapers from the passengers, swing in by the pilot boat and leave a day's reading.

Mystery of Dry Cows Put Up to Sheriff

COLUMBUS, O. — (UP) — The Franklin County sheriff's office has been called to investigate the case of the dry cows.

Mrs. Ida Demeastri complained to sheriff's deputies that when she goes to milk her cows, there is no milk.

Someone, she said, has been stealing into the barn in the middle of the night and milking the cows.
