

Uncle Joe Pricked to the Heart By Allied Move Regarding Berlin

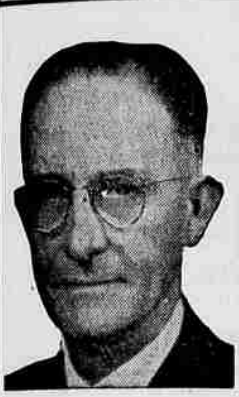

BY J. M. ROBERTS, JR.
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

The allied tactic of taking the Berlin dispute before the United Nations, there to air Russia's anti-war actions before all the world, obviously has pricked Joe Stalin in the heart.

His latest diatribe, accusing everyone else of doing just what world opinion already has condemned Russia of doing, is proof

Metal Expert to Speak To Science Honorary

An account of research in the corrosion of metals being carried on at the University of Oregon and other places in the world will be given by Dr. Pierre Van Rysselberghe, professor of chemistry in the university, before the members of Sigma Xi, national science honorary, Monday. The lecture will be in Room 103 Dady Hall at 8 p. m.

Speaking on "Corrosion Research Here and Elsewhere—With Parenthetical Impressions of a Recent Trip to Europe," Dr. Van Rysselberghe will give an account of chemical progress made in the corrosion field by chemists in half a dozen European countries visited by him during the past summer.

The lecture will be open to the public.

MATS Need More Airplanes

WASHINGTON—(P)—The Military Air Transport Service, hard-pressed for aircraft because of the Berlin airlift demands, is going to get nine big new freight planes the air force said recently.

The cargo-type C-121A's the military version of the airlines Lockheed Constellation, will be delivered "probably this winter," it said.

The first of the military versions, a passenger-carrying C-121, has just completed a flight test at Burbank, Calif., the Air Force reported. It added that this plane will be assigned to MATS' special mission fleet for long-distance transportation of high government executives.

It is understood that the nine cargo carriers will put into trans-Atlantic operation carrying supplies are personnel to Frankfurt, Germany, the main supply base for the Berlin airlift.

The Air Transport Service (made up of both Air Force and Naval planes) currently has about 280 four-engined planes. Of these, more than half are assigned to "operation vultures," either as part of, or supporting, the lift.

To achieve this, MATS virtually has stripped its routes elsewhere in the world of four-engined transports.

Since Oct. 11, when the last twin-engine C-47 was replaced by a larger transport plane, the cost of running the airlift has dropped to $385,000 a day—$8,000 less than the original cost, the air force said Friday night.
