First Record Concert Set

The first of the University of Oregon Sunday afternoon library recorded concerts is scheduled for this Sunday, Nov. 20, at 4 p. m. in the library browsing room.

The concerts, sponsored by the Mu Phi Epsilon Patronesses, a women's music honorary affiliate, will feature record concerts each Sunday throughout the year.

Roy C. Andrews, instructor in chemistry at the University, will present a concert from his record collection of contemporary composers including works by Benjamin Britten and Sergei S. Prokofiev.

The Sunday afternoon concerts are arranged by Mrs. C. A. Horton, Eugene. The concerts are open to the public.

Advanced University Registration Completed

Advance registration at the University of Oregon was concluded at noon Saturday. Comparative figures on totals indicate, according to Registrar Clifford L. Constance, that while there may be a slight drop in enrollment, the total registration for the winter term will probably remain around 8000. Total for fall term, when an all-time high was tallied, was 6149.

The system of allowing a week during the fall terms for registration for winter term has worked out successfully, according to Constance.
