George Dorris Has Roles in Ashland Drama Festival

George Dorris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben F. Dorris of Springfield, is one of about sixty players in this year's Oregon Shakespearean festival at Ashland.

A University of Oregon student, who appeared on the campus in "The Petrified Forest," "Command Decision" and "Marco Millions," Mr. Dorris has received roles in four of the five plays being produced in the Ninth Annual Shakespearean festival.

In "Romeo and Juliet," which opens the series August 2, he is cast as a musician. He handles a similar role in "Midsummer Night's Dream" and portrays the tailor in "Taming of the Shrew." In "Othello," he is a herald.

Director Angus L. Bowmer, who earlier announced that he had received applications for roles in the festival from over 200 of "the nation's finest student actors," is now confident that the 1949 series of Elizabethan dramas on Ashland's outdoor stage will be the "most polished" ever produced here.

Each play will be presented successively, one after the other, so that visitors may see the entire repertoire in five, or at the most, six evenings. All seats are being reserved this year to insure good seats for those who travel long distances to enjoy the festival.

Special Float For Pet Parade

Word has come from Toyland to Humane Society, sponsors of the Pet Parade set for Saturday, August 6, that a special float has been designed for very young masters and mistresses of very young and tiny pets.

The float is large enough to carry all those tots and pets who would not be able to make the long march on foot.

All young people around the ages three to five years are welcome to ride on Toyland float. Dressed in his best bib and tucker, or costume, each should bring his young or tiny pet—kittens, puppies, gold fish, chickens, etc.

The committee asks that large pets be shown in some other way.

The float is being designed and created in Toyland. There is promise that it will be gay and beautiful. All the arrangements for the float are arranged through the courtesy of Willamette Riding Stables and Dale Cooley's family of decorators.

There will be adult chaperones for the peace of mind of parents and safety is guaranteed.

All young people who would like to ride on the Toyland float may make reservations by contacting Mrs. W. H. Chapman, and are urged to do so at once.
