Starving Bears Get Cafeterias

DULUTH, Minn. — (AP) — Residents here were hopeful Saturday that the first of a series of "bear cafeterias" would keep the marauding animals safely outside the city limits.

Poor berry crops and shortage of other natural food have driven the bears into civilized areas in quest of provender. More than 100 have been shot after frightening dwellers in several northern Minnesota communities. Most of them were felled in the Duluth area.

Oil company employees at an outskirts plant set up the first feeding station Friday and others were promised. The Duluth Sanitary Service agreed to keep these stations supplied with garbage, described as "sort of a delicacy" to the starving animals.

Jesse James Still Living?

VEEDERSBURG, Ind. — (AP) — "Ozark Jack" Berlin, who claims to have been a boyhood chum of Jesse James, says he is convinced that J. Frank Dalton really is the notorious bandit.

Dalton, who claims to 102, announced several months ago that he is Jesse James, and that he has been living under the assumed name of Dalton ever since the bandit leader supposedly was slain.

Berlin, who said he played with Jesse James as a boy in the Ozarks, returned from a visit with Dalton at a resort hotel in Stanton, Mo.

"I recognized him from his scars and because he talked about the same happenings and people we both knew when we were kids," Berlin said.

THIS Long

McALESTER, Okla. — (AP) — After a full day's fishing without a single nibble, Jimmy Woody gave up.

Disgusted with his luck, he began rowing to shore. Just then, a three-quarter pound perch jumped into the boat.

Mrs. Yockey and Her Fish . . .

Reaches Down For A Codfish -- Pulls Out A Dangerous Shark

Mrs. Russell Yockey has a fish tale that'll stop her ardent angling husband's future yarns dead cold.

The better half caught a shark with her bare hands!

But it was no ordinary shark that Mrs. Yockey landed at Lincoln Beach, just north of Newport Wednesday, and, of course, it was quite by accident.

While on a deep-sea fishing junket to Depoe Bay Mrs. Yockey and the children decided to try their luck along the beaches while the men folk put to sea.

Walking along the beach she saw what she thought was a Cod fish coming in. She grabbed the sea-devil by the gills and tossed it upon the beach.

"When I got it there still very much alive, I saw its teeth—just like glass and sharp as needles. Believe me I let it die without my help after that sight."

"When it was quite dead I took the fish to the Marine Gardens and learned that it was a Langet shark—a native of tropical waters and to anyone's knowledge never before seen along the northern Pacific coast," she said.

Mr. Yockey had a terse "no comment" on his deep-sea fishing success.

Truck Owners Will Expand

The Lane County Truck Owners Association at a meeting in Corvallis Friday evening decided to enlarge their membership to include truck owners from Benton County.

It was proposed that the name of the organization be changed to Western Oregon Truck Owners Association subject to approval by the Lane County membership.

Considerable opposition was expressed against the practice of excessive fining in the Benton County area the Association reported. It was decided at the meeting to keep an attorney on retainer to request a jury trial for each truck driver receiving an overload ticket.

It was announced that a fund has been started to support the effort to lower the fine rate. Information concerning the fund or contributions should be mailed to the Association, Box 775, Eugene.

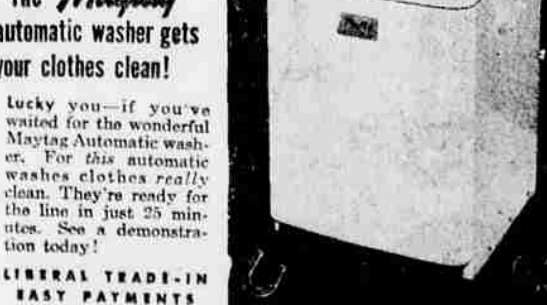

Firemen Extinguish Fire at Alaska Junk

Eugene firemen were called out at 5:09 a.m. Saturday morning to a fire at the Alaska Junk Co., 1701 First Ave. W. The blaze started under a loading platform in a sawdust pile. The flames burned the boards in the platform, but was extinguished before the platform was consumed.

Earlier in the morning, a fire believed to have been caused by a cigarette, burned some trash at the base of a telephone pole in an alley near 50 Eighth Ave. W. The fire originated in a pile of old empty sacks stacked against the pole, firemen said. There was no damage.

A flue fire at the home of Greta Elsworth, 340 Eighth Ave. E. at noon Friday was confined to the chimney and did no damage.

GAR Commander Theo Penland Sets Final Encampment Plans

VANCOUVER, Wash. — (AP) — Theodore Augustus Penland, the 100-year-old commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, made final plans Friday for a trip to the last encampment of Civil War veterans from the armies of the North.

He remarked sadly that there would not be a bugler remaining from "the ranks of the boys in blue" to play taps at the meeting in Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 28.

The old soldier said the assembly of four survivors would take place where the original grand army formed under Gen. John A. Logan in 1867—the Claypool Hotel.

Penland will have no successor as commander. He will head the GAR until, as he put it, "the books are closed." All told there are 17 members alive, but only four will be there.

He was born Jan. 23, 1849 in Goshen, Ind., the son of a farmer. He served with the Indiana Volunteers, principally on picket duties but he was on the fringe of the second battle of Bull Run in which his father was fatally wounded by a rifle ball.

"Were Tougher Then"
"People were tougher then," he declared. "My father walked three miles with a hole in his belt-line before he dropped dead."

Penland attributes his long life to travel, clean living and walking.

He once walked 1400 miles on the trail to California after Apomattox.

He enlisted at the illegal age of 16 by writing "18" on a scrap of paper, wedging it in his shoe and swearing he was "over 18."

He'll Speak this Time
"I was on the skirts of the crowd at the first encampment in Indianapolis, and I didn't hear any of the speakers," he reflected. "This time I'm going to give a ship-launching speech that I composed during the last war."

He recited it without a slip in a firm, resonant, drill-sergeant's voice.

It began: "Guide this ship to victory for America . . ."

Doesn't Plan Marriage
The spry, bespectacled centenarian has 12 great-grandchildren and 19 great-great grandchildren. He doesn't expect to marry again, soon. "I'm going to wait a little while . . . until I get older," he said.

"And take this down," he said. "Take this down. A Jeep will never replace an army mule. You had respect for an army mule. It could kick."

Then he told of his trip in 1938 to Gettysburg for the unveiling of a monument, dedicated to both the Union and Confederate armies.

"After they lit the gas flame that will burn forever, they rounded up 800 Boy Scouts and 800 wheelchairs to trundle us off to the train. I asked my Boy Scout what it was for. After he told me I said, 'Get in son. Let me push you.'"

Police Cite Drivers After Car Accidents

Two minor automobile accidents resulted in citation by city police Friday afternoon and evening.

A car driven by Eugene T. Glasgow, 31, Rt. 3, Box 420, Eugene, was traveling east on Broadway when Bernard L. Moser, 24, Gen. Del., Eugene, made a left turn off the highway while going west and the two cars collided.

There were no injuries and there was little damage to either car, but Moser was cited for not having a driver's license.

An accident at the intersection of Madison St. and Sixth Ave. W. at 9:05 p.m. involved a car operated by Byron J. Hoskins, 29, 444 Lincoln St., and a parked vehicle. Hoskins, while in the left hand lane traveling west on Sixth forced over until he mangled the parked car near the intersection. The parked car was pushed 21 feet, but caused little damage. Hoskins was cited for violating the basic rule.
