

Maison to Head National Guard

State Police Head To Lead Division

SALEM — (UP) — Gen. H. G. (Fod) Maison, superintendent of Oregon State Police, has been named commander of the 41st Division.

Maison was in Washington, D.C., this week to appear before an Army board in connection with his promotion from brigadier general to major general. He succeeds Maj. Gen. Raymond Carroll as commander of the 41st Division.

The change in command is under terms of an agreement between Oregon and Washington which gives each state the commanding officer for a period of four years.

Maison is a veteran of both world wars and has been with the National Guard 25 years. He was a lieutenant colonel when he went overseas with the 41st Division as a battalion commander in World War II. He was later transferred to the Sixth Infantry Division, where he commanded the 63rd and 20th regiments. He became a full colonel in March, 1945, and was promoted to brigadier general with the 41st Division Feb. 26, 1947.

'Of Snails, And Puppy Dogs' Tails' Incentive Plan

Increased Output Basis for Raises

AKRON, O. — (AP) — It's still a boy's world.

City council Tuesday tabled without one dissenting vote a proposal to levy fines from $5 to $50 against boys who throw snowballs or other objects at buses.

Not even bus driver Francis Greissing, who introduced the measure, attempted to defend it.

Police officials said the proposed law would be hard to enforce and that there were existing laws on the subject.

Veteran Groups Plead for Action

SALEM — (AP) — The State Bond Commission will ask the State Retirement Board and the State Industrial Accident Commission to buy bonds to pay Oregon's veterans' bonus.

That was decided here Tuesday at a meeting of the bond commission.

Representatives of veterans organizations urged the bond commission to try to sell the veterans bonds to state agencies. The retirement board and accident commission are the only two agencies with enough trust funds available. Both in the past have indicated they preferred to keep their present investment.

The suggestion was made that these two agencies buy a small portion of the $40,000,000 bond issue and with this money get bonus payments underway.

Private buyers have refused to bid on the bonds since a regional federal credit restraint committee ruled that the bonus would be inflationary.

Members of the State Bond Commission are Gov. Douglas McKay, State Treasurer Walter J. Pearson and L. O. Arens, a member of the accident commission.

4 Candidates in Race To Head Young GOPs

PORTLAND — (UP) — Four candidates were in the race Tuesday for state chairman of the Oregon Young Republicans, who will be chosen at the annual meeting here November 30 and December 1.

Clay Myers, who headed the Oregon delegation to the Young Republican national convention at Boston, Mass., this year, announced Monday that he is seeking the chairmanship.

Also in the contest for the top spot were Phil Roth, former president of the Multnomah County chapter, Bill Jackson, Baker, and Robert Dickey, Medford.

WSB Approves Incentive Plan

Increased Output Basis for Raises

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Over labor members' objections, public and industry members of the Wage Stabilization Board have voted to permit some incentive pay plans, designed to provide added pay for increased output.

A freeze on such plans has been in effect since Jan. 25. The board said any new plan, or revision of an old one, which involves a whole plant or industry must be approved by the board.

For individual workers or groups of workers, standards were set up Tuesday which would require: an earning opportunity of at least 15 per cent above normal rates, a minimum wage guarantee against loss of earnings. No ceiling was placed on the amount of incentive pay which may be paid.

Most labor unions have traditionally opposed incentive pay plans on the ground they may involve a speed-up of work without adequate additional pay.

Portland Eyes Bus Company

PORTLAND — (AP) — City Commissioner J. E. Bennett thinks municipal ownership may be the answer to a request for an increase in Portland's bus fares.

Gordon A. Steele, president of the Portland Traction Co., Tuesday asked permission to increase the fare from 13 to 16 cents. Rising costs and declining patronage make the increase necessary, he said.

Bennett suggested city ownership of the buses and told Steele that the fare boost would not be granted. Bennett also said he would ask the owners of the traction company to appear before the council to discuss future operations.

Meanwhile, traction company workers announced through their business agent that they would ask for a 15-cent hourly pay increase in contract negotiations. Other benefits also will be sought, they said.

PROBLEM:

How can we develop more products from our forests?

Wood is truly a wonder material. Bound within the protective shield of bark are the necessary elements for a multitude of new products. Many parts of the tree, including the bark, which were once of little value can now be made into useful products, thanks to science.

The problem then becomes one of developing manufacturing and marketing methods that will ultimately be successful. When a new product is successfully marketed, it creates new and permanent jobs, makes better use of our forest resources, and provides more stable sources of taxes which is the only support of government.

ANSWER:
SCIENTISTS AND ENGINEERS CREATE NEW PRODUCTS, METHODS AND MARKETS

The Weyerhaeuser Timber Company, as well as many others in the forest industry, steadily reinvests income in research and development. For example, the Weyerhaeuser Development Department at Longview, Washington, is manned by a skilled staff of 40 scientists and engineers. Similar work is carried on by a corps of chemists in the Company's pulp mill laboratories. From their work is coming new products, new uses, and new methods which are unlocking the fabulous storehouse of the forest.
