LOOK and LISTEN

WITH GLEN STADLER

The following story, "Christmas in Korea—1951" was written by Jack Vaughn, editor of "The Miramar JET JOURNAL", San Diego. Jack is former manager of the University's radio station, KWAX.)

• • •

Snowflakes swirled like 'copter blades as the two soldiers trudged toward the light they saw in the distance . . . They were tired, these soldiers, Al and Ray; and they were cold . . .

"Well, we're almost there," Al said. "Looks like a sentry up ahead."

As they drew nearer, the sentry halted them, and took them to the Officer of the Day's shack . . .

"Well," the Captain said, "you guys aren't going to find any rides passing by here tonight. Unless you feel like walking fifty miles, you might as well plan on spending Christmas Eve with the Marines . . .

Al and Ray followed him (a sergeant) as he left the shack and crossed the field of newly fallen snow. Then the sergeant stopped in front of a small building . . .

(Inside) a lanky hospital corpsman closed the book he was reading and stood up. "What've we got here, Jeff? Patients?"

"Nope," the Sergeant smiled. "Just travelers . . . The O. D. said you could bunk 'em here tonight."

He looked at Al and Ray. "This is the Doc. He's in the Navy and a reserve at that . . . but I guess he's okay."

Al and Ray introduced themselves.

Then the Doc said, "Come on over here by the stove." He turned to Jeff. "And why don't you go over to that mess you call a mess hall of yours and bring back a pot of joe?"

"And why don't you go swab a deck?"

"Listen, jarhead . . ."

"You're lucky, I was goin' to bring over some coffee anyway," the Sergeant said as he opened the door. "In your coffee I'll put poison."

"Best mess sergeant in the Marines," the Doc said.

. . . in a few minutes, Jeff was back.

Doc poured the coffee. "Yep, this is just like home. I always celebrate Christmas Eve sitting by the fire drinking coffee in the middle of Korea."

"Doc, you sound kind of bitter in a way," Jeff said in mock sympathy.

"Oh, I guess I am kind of bitter in a way," the Doc smiled. It's kind of tough to be away from the wife and kids at Christmas . . . but I guess I'll live."

"At least we have snow," Al added cheerfully.

For more than an hour they talked of how they had spent their Christmases. And after a while, they forgot that they were in the middle of Korea . . . All of them except Ray. He just sat there.

Then, Jeff suggested, "Let's sing some Christmas carols."

And they sang. (All except Ray.)

Ray stood up. "I'm fed up with this stupid sentimental stuff. I don't know how in the hell grown men like you can go around making fools of yourselves just because it's Christmas Eve. There's just one place to celebrate Christmas and it's not in the middle of Korea." He stomped to the other end of the dispensary.

IWA Election Still in Doubt

PORTLAND— (AP) —The CIO Woodworkers executive board went home Thursday without naming a new president for the 110,000 member union.

For four days the board checked the vote in last September's election but board members failed to reach agreement on whether James E. Fadling, incumbent, or A. L. Hartung, won.

Both Fadling and Hartung are from Portland.

Earlier "The Woodworker" the union's newspaper, said that Hartung was elected. The board criticized the publication for carrying the story.

The board will meet again Jan. 4 in an effort to certify the election and install new officers.

Reason for the board's failure to certify the election to date is not known. It is believed, however, that a number of votes have been questioned.

London Bridge Stunt Brings Fine to Pilot

LONDON — (AP) — Frank Miller, 39-year-old amateur pilot, was fined $280 Thursday for flying his light plane under the London Tower Bridge Nov. 25

Miller told the court he did it on a dare from his 13-year-old son, who was with him in the rented aircraft.

The plane flew between a bridge roadway and overhead walk which are 120 feet.

WOODEN MAIN DUG UP

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—(U.P.)—Excavators uncovered an ancient wooden water main here while digging near a downtown building. The two-foot section of hollow log was part of the city's water system dating from colonial days.

Check Puzzles Judy But Not $10 Bill

KENOSHA, Wis. —(U.P.)— Judy Kolar is only 11 years old but she knows a good thing when she sees it, even if she doesn't recognize it.

Judy found a funny-looking slip of paper with figures on it and stuck it in her pocket. Hours later she showed it to her mother, who gasped. The paper was a check for $2489.

Police helped return the check to the payee, who gave Judy a $10 bill. That suited her, because she'd seen that kind of money before.

Sailor in Big Hurry Pays Up in Court

LINCOLN, Neb. —(U.P.)— A Lincoln sailor knew he'd get into trouble with naval authorities if he missed a parade through downtown Lincoln.

He sped to the parade in his automobile, arriving on time.

However, in the attempt, he: Went through a stop sign. Ran a red light. Drove 40 miles per hour in a 20-mile zone.

The court fined Harold E. Hutchison $8 and costs.

FANCY NAMES PICKED

CHEROKEE, N. C.—(U.P.)—Many Cherokee Indians selected their family names from among the first words of English they learned to speak and some of them came up with unique ones. Some of the family names in this reservation area are Walkingstick, Climbingbear, Runningdeer, Goingback, Bigmeat, German, English, and French.

MAN OF MANY PARTS

POCAHONTAS, Tenn.—(U.P.)—A variety store owner, J. W. Hudson, has a grocery, service station, restaurant and picture show all in one building. Hudson also finds time to serve as town postmaster.
