New Classes Projected At Y Community Center

Young Adult Committee of the YWCA announces for the new year three workshops in Community Social Arts to be held at the Y-Center.

Prior to the opening of the Folk Dance class Jan. 17, there will be a folk dance party the evening of Jan. 10. All folk dance enthusiasts are invited to attend without charge. Registration for the 10-week, Thursday night class may be made at any time from Jan. 10. Mrs. William Roecker will direct the class which will be open to beginners as well as those with some proficiency in dancing.

An activity new to the "YW" program is a class in Dresden Art to be taught by Mrs. Herbert Welch, who is a designer for a large paint firm. The class, especially timed for housewives, will be devoted to the painting of plaques, figurines and other objects of art. No special talent is required to bring forth good results, it is said, and no firing is required. The class has been set for Fridays, 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. which also are YWCA hours at the nursery at the Methodist Church. First lesson in a twelve-lesson course will be given Jan. 11.

In February the Committee plans to open two additional activities. One will be an evening group in Peter Hunt art (similar to Pennsylvania Dutch). George J. Brown, art consultant at a local store, will lead this workshop. "Peter Hunt" is a technique developed from European peasant art to renew small pieces of furniture and objects of art such as trays, bowls, picture frames and kitchen wares. While new to Eugene, this work has been popular throughout the east. Another class which may be included in the offerings is bridge for beginners. Many requests have been registered for this. All classes are open to both men and women.
