A reception in Springfield Memorial Building honored Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Julian of Thurston on their 30th wedding anniversary Dec. 30. The couple was married in North Dakota in 1921, coming to Oregon from Iowa in 1944.

About 30 guests attended the reception, but bad weather kept away friends from the upper McKenzie area. Instead, they sent congratulatory cards and gifts. Children of the Julians gave the reception: Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Julian, Orris Julian and Jerry Julian, all of Eugene.

The hall was simply decorated in blue and white theme: the white linen tablecloth set off by the silver, blue candles and white chrysanthemums, and a white Christmas tree with blue balls and blue lights adding a holiday touch.

Mrs. H. H. Halvorson of Eugene cut the tiered cake, while Mrs. Elbin Nelson and Mrs. Julian poured.

Velvet Warm and Practical

NEW YORK— (NEA) —When mothers go shopping for coat-and-leggings sets for small daughters, they look for warmth and practicality. They'll find, this year, that velvet can take it.

Once, velvet appeared in small-girl fashions for party wear only. Now, it's still rated dressy, of course, but it cleans and wears beautifully. Further, little girls love it, so everybody's happy.

For a little girl who's getting bigger and thus takes a size five or so, there's a princess coat by Bambury in wine velvet that has real mink trim in the way of buttons and neck bow. Coat has turn-back cuffs and a skirt with a wide flare. There's a matching velvet hat with mink pompon. Leggings zip at the sides for easy donning.

A small girl of size three or four will love a blue velvet coat, another Bambury design, with a squirrel collar. Velvet bows trim the front of the coat and appear on the bonnet, where they're centered with pompons of squirrel. Coat has an empire-style back and a front yoke.

Velvet trims a miniature pyramid coat in soft monotone tweed fabric by Stevens. Curved shoulder seams and shining buttons are high style touches. Though it comes in colors to delight a small girl—Bermuda blue, coral, taffy yellow and gold—the tweed will stand up to an active life. And that will please mother.

Recipes

Baked stuffed fish fillets are much easier to serve than a whole baked fish because they are boneless. Stuff them with a simple bread and mushroom dressing, using a can of chopped broiled mushrooms for richer flavor. You can stuff and bake quick-frozen fish fillets with the same delicious results.

Fish Fillets with Mushroom Stuffing

1 tbs. butter, 1 tbs. minced onion, 3 oz. can chopped broiled mushrooms, 1½ cups soft white bread cubes, ⅛ tsp. marjoram, 4 flounder fillets, about 1½ lbs., or 2 fillets of sole, 2 tbs. fat, ½ tsp. salt, 1 tsp. lemon juice.

Melt butter in small frying pan. Add onion and let cook about 3 or 4 minutes, stirring frequently, over moderate heat. Add contents of can of mushrooms and heat to boiling. Meanwhile cut crusts from enough white bread to make 1½ cups when cut in ½ inch cubes. Place cubed bread in a bowl. Pour hot mushrooms and onion over the bread. Add marjoram and whip lightly with folk until bread breaks up slightly. Add salt and pepper to taste.

Arrange two fillets on bottom of greased shallow baking dish. Spread the mushroom dressing evenly over the fillets and top with the two remaining fish fillets. Soften the fat, then gradually blend in the salt and the lemon juice, keeping a smooth mixture at all times. Spread this browning glaze over the tops of the fillets. Bake in moderately hot oven, 375°F, until the fish flakes easily and turns opaque, about 30 minutes. Serve immediately with parsley cream sauce. Serves four.

DUV Lodge To Install

Traditional Chase Family Gathering Draws Big Crowd

All the "newest babies and the oldest grandparents" attended the third annual Chase-Dodd-Kingsley-Wheeler family reunion at the River Road Club New Year's Day, bringing the total to about 155, although some were kept away by bad weather, according to the new secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Donald Kingsley.

Other new officers are Harry Chase, president, and Joe Holaday, vice president. Their major duties will be planning arrangements for the Fourth of July picnic and next year's New Year's Day party.

Beginning with a noon potluck dinner, the party lasted until about 4 p.m., although the clean-up committee worked until 5 p.m. or so. Much of the afternoon was spent in visiting, but there were other forms of amusement, too. One feature was an "identify-the-baby" contest in which new babies were brought in and guests attempted to connect the baby with its proper family. Elmo Chase showed movies for the children, and parents played canasta. Lowell Chase, accompanied by his wife, sang three numbers.

Retiring officers, in charge of the 1951 parties, were Dale Kingsley, president; Mrs. Tom Harper, vice president, and Mrs. John Northam, secretary-treasurer.
