Eight Local Architects Display Designs for Oregon Residences

A photographic exhibit showing what Eugene architects are doing in the way of residential design soon will be available for display at meetings throughout Lane County.

The exhibit, sponsored by local members of the Oregon Society of Architects, was put on display last week at the University of Oregon art school for a student preview. It will be displayed for the public in the Erb Memorial Union Bldg. sometime around Feb. 1.

After that, the display will be available for club meetings or similar gatherings throughout the county.

Featuring the work of eight Eugene architects, the exhibits present photographs and floor plans, plus a description of the projects, of six Eugene homes, one Coos Bay residence, and one Florence residence.

A spokesman for the architects said the exhibit is aimed to demonstrate a wide range of design solutions to the problems of modern living.

"Despite the diversity," he observed, "there runs through the exhibition an unmistakable consistency of design expressing simple beauty and a sensitive appreciation of our native Oregon."

Bob Wilmsen was in charge of the committee who prepared the exhibit.

"I nearly ITCHED to death. Now I'm HAPPY!"
