LOOK and LISTEN
WITH GLEN STADLER

From railroad clerk to glass estimator to auto salesman to reporter to renowned editor . . . that's the success story of James Soule Pope.

Glen Stadler

Pope is visiting the University of Oregon campus as guest of the Journalism school, to give the Eric Allen Memorial Lecture Friday afternoon; feature of the annual Oregon Press Conference.

JAMES F. POPE was born in Zebulon, Georgia, 14 Sept. 1900. After Emory U., Atlanta, his first job was that of railroad clerk. Then he switched to glass estimator (whatever that is) for the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. He worked two years as auto salesman before he got a job with the Atlanta Journal as reporter . . . in 1926.

Pope rose to the position of managing editor, then went to the Lousiville (Ky.) Courier-Journal, for which he is executive editor. During the war, he took a six-month leave of absence to work in the Office of Censorship.

Pope won his national reputation not only as a fighting editor, but also as a vigorous champion of freedom of information. He is chairman of the Committee on Freedom of Information of the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

In that capacity he is one of the leaders in the battle to prevent government news security from becoming censorship.

POPE BELIEVES that governments have become so enormous and their powers of news-control so diverse and insidious, that the basic facts required for sound judgment have become harder and harder to identify and to capture.

Pope says: "We knock ourselves out covering the Capitol and the White House, and a few news-obvious departments like State and Defense. But we know little or nothing of all the vast organisms that surround and influence the conduct of our affairs and the expenditure of billions of our money.

". . . . (there are) many instances in which the people's right to know has been circumscribed or wiped out by 'regulation'. Almost all the administrative news of our government is so controlled.

Pope reports that the "cult of secrecy" is not restricted to Washington; that there are many cases of news suppression by state and local officials.

A ROSE: Freedom of Information.

A THORN: News suppression.

Wallgren Eyes Door to Politics

WASHINGTON— (AP) —Mon C. Wallgren, former Washington State governor and U. S. senator, said Wednesday there is still a possibility he may run for elective office in his home state.

"I plan to go back to the state in a little while and see how things stand," he told a reporter, "but right now I'm not very enthused about it."

Wallgren, a personal friend of President Truman, visited him at the White House Tuesday. He declined to say what they talked about.

Wallgren resigned last fall as chairman of the Federal Power Commission. He has been mentioned as a possible candidate for governor, U. S. senator or congressman.

Housewives Protest High Prices in Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil —(AP) —Rioters headed by housewives attacked butcher shops and groprices, broke into the store and Parana State, Wednesday.

The crowds, protesting high cery stores in Curitiba, capital of tossed goods into the street. There was no report of casualties.

The scientific name for Western red cedar, Thuja plicata, means "a tree with sweet smelling wood whose leaves are folded and plaited."

Foods Prices Rise

NEW YORK— (U.P.)— Wholesale food prices on the Dun & Bradstreet Index rose three cents to $6.60 during the week ended Wednesday, it was announced Thursday.

The index compared with $7.31 for the same week in 1951, when the peak for the year was hit. It now stands at 9.7 per cent below a year ago, but 10.7 per cent over the pre-Korea level of $5.96.

Until he was convinced that conservative cutting of Christmas trees beneficially thinned dense young forests, Theodore Roosevelt would not allow them in the White House.
