Texan Offered Post at WSC

3 Men in Running For Presidency

SPOKANE — (AP) — The presidency of Washington State College has been offered to Dr. Charles Clement French, vice president of Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College, the Spokesman-Review said Wednesday night.
 In a long distance phone call Dr. French said he met last Sunday in Chicago with James McCluskey, president of the WSC Board of Regents, the paper said.
 It added that although Dr. French would make no statement about a possible job at the Pullman, Wash., campus, he said his resignation as vice president of Texas A and M is to come before the Board of Regents of that school on Feb. 29.

McCluskey refused to comment on the paper's report. However, he said the field of candidates for the presidency was narrowed to three at the regents' last meeting. One of the three was Dr. French, he said.
 Washington State regents are scheduled to meet in Pullman this Sunday.
 McCluskey said the appointment of a new president would be discussed at the regents' Sunday meeting, but he did not believe the board would announce any appointment at that time.

DR. FRENCH told the paper he visited the WSC campus in December and at that time "was much impressed with the people, with the board of regents and with the college."
 Dr. French has been at the Texas school, a land grant college, for a year and a half.
 In College Station, Tex., Dr. French was not available for comment.
 Dr. M. T. Harrington, president of AMM College, said "Dr. French's offer is news to me."

Youth Rescued From Depths Of Punchbowl
 NEWPORT, Ore. — (AP) — Coast Guardsmen rescued a 20-year old Portland youth Tuesday after he fell 45 feet down a cliff into the Pacific Ocean seven miles north of here.
 Gail A. Nadeau was standing with a companion at the edge of the Devil's Punchbowl, a rocky cavern on the rugged shoreline watching the ocean, when he slipped and plunged down the cliff into the water. The tide was coming in and he managed to cling to a rock.
 His companion, whose name was not learned, ran to a nearby grocery and telephoned the Coast Guard station here. Five Coast Guardsmen arrived at the scene eight minutes later.
 Seaman Apprentice Morris Kent, carrying a life jacket, was lowered over the edge of the cliff on a rope. A former Cannon Beach life guard, he swam 15 feet to the rock, tied the rope around Nadeau's waist.
 Nadeau then was hoisted up the face of the cliff to safety. Kent was brought up later.
 Nadeau, who was vacationing at a nearby cabin, suffered cuts, bruises and exposure, but did not require hospitalization.
 Other Coast Guardsmen who aided in the rescue were Chief Boatswain's Mate William Watkins, Long Beach, Wash.; Yeoman 3rd Class Norman Meyers, Longview, Wash.

'Hunger Marchers' Evicted

OLYMPIA, Wash. — (AP) — About 100 angry "hunger marchers" were escorted or carried bodily out of Gov. Arthur B. Langlie's office Wednesday night.
 First to leave was William Pennock, president of the Washington pension union, who was carried out in the arms of two husky state patrolmen. The hunger marchers applauded each member as about 30 patrolmen calmly carried or escorted the group out.

The pension union members descended on Olympia to protest cuts in welfare grants and to demand that the governor call a special session of the legislature to appropriate more funds.
 The governor, however, was out of town, and the marchers decided to spend the night in his office.
 Langlie was in Portland, Ore., for a meeting of the Columbia Basin interagency committee.
 Pennock charged "we have been treated with contempt so far as Governor Langlie is concerned. We will be fully justified staying here to express our burning wrath at the contempt and arrogance shown toward us."
 Patrol Chief James A. Pryde then called in about 30 patrolmen. Pennock was first to leave, carried by two patrolmen. About half of the entire group had to be carried individually from the office. Some walked out voluntarily.
 Pennock, in a corridor outside the governor's office, led cheers and applause for each member who was carried out. But there was no outbreak of violence by the pension union delegates and the patrol's job of moving them was calm and orderly.

 Once out of the governor's rooms, the delegation moved to the office of Secretary of State Earl Coe. They had asked Coe earlier if they could use his office if forced to leave the governor's office.
 Coe decided his office was public property and he would be obliged to leave it open for the night.
 In 1939 the average retail lumber building material dealer had 5.5 employees; in 1948 this number had increased to 8.3 employees.
