CARROTS GROW BIGGER, FASTER WHEN THE FARMER THINS THE ROWS —

TREES RESPOND THE SAME WAY, BUT THE FARMER CAN GET MONEY FOR HIS TREE THINNING —

There's Gold In Your Woodlot

(Third of a series of six articles on second-growth forests as a cash crop, prepared by private, state and federal forest agencies)

How can I harvest my farm woodlot timber and make the most money? That's the most important consideration. The answer rests in proper management of your woodlot.

You have seen that more than one product can be taken from your woodlot. The products you get depend on 1) type of timber you have, 2) local markets, 3) selling prices, and 4) logging costs. Always cut the products that bring the most net return to you. Keep in touch with markets and buyers.

To manage your trees you work with nature. Each young forest starts with thousands of trees to an acre. As the trees grow the weaker ones die for lack of sun, food, water and air. This natural thinning process is called mortality and the loss in unmanaged woodlots will run to a cord per acre each year.

You can harvest those trees and improve on nature. By cutting the right trees you will release growing space for the smaller, better quality trees in your woodlot. You change loss to income and at the same time improve your forest.

Stamp Shop Opens Doors

A new Eugene business which will cater to the needs of stamp collectors opened at 745 Pearl St. this week.

It is the Eugene Stamp Service, owned by L. L. Frazer, a native Eugenean who returned to this community about a year ago.

He will offer a varied assortment of stamps in packets, singles and sets—both U. S. and foreign—plus albums, catalogues and other supplies. Hours will be 4 to 9 p. m. week days plus all day Saturday and Sunday.

Frazer said he plans to continually enlarge his stock to meet the needs of local collectors. He can also supply stamps and items not in stock on request.

School Board Calls For Addition Bids

Bids were called this week by Eugene School District 4 for classroom additions to Dunn, Whiteaker, Westworeland, and Santa Clara elementary schools. All are one classroom and toilet room additions except the Westworeland project which calls for 3 classrooms, toilet room, hallway and play passage.

Architect for the additions is John L. Reynolds, Eugene. Bids will close 2 p. m., March 24.

Lestico Heads Grocers' Group

H. R. Lestico, Eugene grocer, Tuesday night was elected president of the new Lane County Chapter of the Oregon Food Merchants Assn.

5 Egyptians Jailed For Starting Fires

CAIRO, Egypt—(AP)—A military court convicted five Egyptians Wednesday of setting fire to a movie house during Cairo's Jan. 26 torch riots. Three were sentenced to 12 years, one to 10 and the other to eight. A sixth defendant was acquitted.

The prosecution, demanding stiff penalties, said 700 buildings were destroyed or damaged in the riots, which cost 87 lives. About 115 other persons are slated for trial in connection with the riots.

Six Germans Killed

PFULLINGEN, Germany — (AP) The top floor of a textile factory packed with raw material collapsed and fell on the floor beneath Wednesday, killing six of the 200 workers.
