Red Propaganda Pushed in China

By PHIL NEWSOM

United Press Foreign Analyst

Any good story must have a villain as well as a hero. It helps if both are rather simple-minded fellows, the one bent only on good and the other only on evil. It also helps if the villain is rich and the hero is poor.

The Russian Communists long ago realized the value of the simple formula. Thus, it is the landlord against the peasant or "Wall Street" against the poor but honest working man.

THE SUCCESS of the formula is demonstrated almost daily, and in the totalitarian countries it is more effective since it is distributed through a 100 per cent controlled press and radio.

Now the Russians, past-masters at the art, have passed it along to the Chinese Reds in whose hands the constant reiteration of the "big lie" is being used to cement the country firmly against the West.

It is the more disturbing when it is noted that, no matter what other troubles they may have, the Communists are tireless in pursuing their propaganda line.

Thus the Chinese, with a war on in Korea, with epidemics and threatened famine at home, beset by party purges and in the midst of a campaign against both landlords and merchants, still are able to assign more than a million and a half persons to the propaganda job alone.

And they're carrying on their campaign effectively in a country which has no TV, few radios or telephones and even fewer news-

PINT-SIZED WALKIE-TALKIE—Scarcely larger than a soda-pop bottle, the Norwegian walkie-talkie, above, is produced for use in Norway's rugged, wooded country. Earphones are worn like a cap, and the microphone may be hidden in a mitten. Five thousand sets, valued at $500, 000 are being manufactured in Norway for her armed forces. Procurement of $15,000 worth of American radio tubes was made possible through the Mutual Security Agency's defense support program to NATO nations. The sets would have cost 1 to 3 million dollars to import.
