

Portrait Artist For 10 Day Stay

University of Oregon before she attended the Art Institute of Chicago. She later enrolled at the Academy of Design in Philadelphia and the Mark Hopkins of San Francisco.

A quick and energetic individual, Mrs. Jacobs spends less time with sketching than many portrait painters. She prefers to get on to the oil work with a minimum of chalk or pastel preparation. The completed canvas takes her about ten days.

Mrs. Jacobs points out that a portrait must capture not only the external likeness of the subject, but also the internal feeling and personality. Because of this a portrait painter must have sympathy for other people to produce an outstanding work of art whether in modernistic squares and triangles or conventional style.

Her paintings, which have won widespread acclaim, have been exhibited in Paris, New York, Peking, China, Honolulu, Boston, and many other art centers of the world. For their realism, charm, color, and lifelike quality they have been rated among the best in their field.

Among the "other things" that Mrs. Jacobs has on her schedule during her ten-day stay here (she arrived Sunday) is the touching up of portraits of some thirty famous authors before turning a number of them over to the University for permanent possession. She is author of "Portraits of Thirty Authors" based upon these works.

Clubbers To Vie For Trophy

Donor of the trophy is Joe Jones, owner of Eugene's Coast-to-Coast store. Contesting skipper must have competed in five of this year's seven-point races so that a handicap can be established. All classes of boats are competing. The race is a long-distance contest, the course being 10 knots (12 miles) long.

The MATURE PARENT

Courtroom Conversation With Delinquent Parent

By MURIEL LAWRENCE

Waiting for a session of the juvenile court to open, this mother said, "I don't want to get my kid's hearing changed," she said. "I don't want to get the judge sore at me. He wants me to stay home for two days before he's sent up."

"You have a green scarf tied under her chin. Framed in it, her face glowed and expressionless as a middle-aged doll's. When she spoke, she went on, lowering her voice just so I could hear."

"Should I take him home? I don't want to be responsible for what he might do. He's the court's job now, not mine, isn't he?"

"That's all I want," she sighed. "I don't want to see him sent up until he's 18. My face going rigid with distaste and hastily rearranged hair to myself. 'Look here, you haven't been appointed to judgment here. You're in this place to look, listen and try to understand.'"

"How old is your boy?"

"He'll be 13 next month," she said. "I don't know why they let you smoke in here. He's bad this kid. Bad blood. I don't hold him responsible."

"Nobody's born bad. Not your boy, not you, not anyone," she said. "I don't know why. He curses me all the time."

"I said, 'he's frightened at being ashamed. Children supposed to curse us. Perhaps he's terribly ashamed. He's ashamed I always get angry. Have you ever been through the tall windows was warm on our backs. Off in a distant corridor, a woman was crying. Because human being who wanted her child 'sent up' for five years young life unbuttoned her shabby coat."

"I never had no home or parents," she said in her inflection. "My mother died when I was born and my old man with some woman. My aunt raised me. Say, was I knocked around. If I told you how I was knocked around . . ."

"This conversation for a reader who has asked me if I am punishing the parents of delinquent children."

"I could no more approve of punishing the unconscious who sat beside me that day in the juvenile court than approve punishing dogs for chasing cats, cabbages for not eating, or famine victims for developing nutritional disorders. I could most heartily approve would be better public juvenile court clinics for the treatment of emotionally unstable parents as well as their offspring. (NEA).

Secretaries Gather Here On Saturday

Eugene, because of its central location, has been selected by Oregon Chapters of the National Secretaries Association for a regional meeting Saturday, Aug. 23, at the Eugene Hotel. Members from chapters in Portland, Corvallis, Salem, Klamath Falls, Medford, and Eugene will attend.

Business sessions will be conducted in the afternoon. Oregon delegates will report on their attendance at the national convention of NSA recently held in Washington, D.C.

Preceding the banquet at the Eugene Hotel, a Cheerio Hour will be held at 10 home of Miss Ethel Kempe, 364 E. Broadway. Mrs. Joe Kats, president of the local Amateurs Chapter, is in charge of arrangements.

OSC Picnic Set For Next Friday

Annual OSC picnic will be held at Jantzen Beach on Friday at 6 p.m. Those attending are advised to take their own food for the supper, but coffee and cakes will be furnished. Special entertainment is scheduled at 7 p.m. The picnic was planned to precede the Shrine game of Saturday for convenience of those planning to attend that event.

Baby Born in India

Word has been received of the birth of a son, James Allen, to Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Robinson (Marilyn Harris) in Landaur, Mussoorie, India. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Harris of Eugene, and Mr. and Mrs. Ruel Robinson of Monmouth. The Robinsons are agricultural missionaries sponsored by First Methodist Church of Eugene, and stationed at Allahabad Agricultural Institute in Allahabad, India.

ANNotations 'Like Him? He's Yours!'

IT TAKES a stout heart to receive a baby by airplane—right out of the blue—for a surprise birthday present, even when it's a grandson. Jess Hayden proved that he has a hardy ticker—but he DID go home and make out a check to the wrong carpenter because he was slightly dazed!

MRS. HAYDEN loves surprises, and is willing to work a bit to make them come about. She began planning this one weeks ago, by supplying a supposed reason for hurrying some household remodeling at which the man of the house was taking his leisurely time. She showed him a letter (carefully prepared with traced signature) from an old school friend, which said he would be up here about the middle of August to look about for farm property. "At least one bedroom MUST be finished," she insisted.

LETTERS to their daughter-in-law, wife of Dr. Jess Hayden Jr. (who with the baby, Roderick James Hayden, has been living in Boscabel, Wis., while the young dentist is serving on the U.S.S. Wasp in the Mediterranean) carried on the plans. Both young Mrs. Hayden and a younger son, Stephen, also have August birthdays, and they would have a real celebration.

DR. HAYDEN, learning of the plan with approval (except "Everybody's going to see my baby before me, doggone it!") decided the trip would better be made by plane, since Roderick measures time by months, still. So Daughter-in-law Esther was supplied with a message to be sent back to Eugene: it carried the fictitious word that "Aunt Eleanor and Uncle John would be passing through Eugene on a certain date, and would have but a very few moments at the airport. Could Gwendolen get all the family out to see them, meeting a stated flight of United?"

CONJECTURE as to what was bringing Aunt Eleanor, etc., went on, but the family car reached the airport at the appointed time, all members present. This time, however, the plane had arrived ahead of schedule.

AS THEY ENTERED the waiting room, a young woman was standing with her back to them, and beside her on a bench lay a smiling baby boy. Jess Hayden stopped: "Look at that baby, Mother . . . Isn't he a cute one?" "Mother" pulled him on, toward the baby and the girl. The latter, turning, revealed herself as the one they'd last seen in bridal white. "If you like that baby," she said to Father Hayden, "how would you like him for a grandson?"

AND THAT'S why the carpenter got a check made out to the other carpenter.

Luncheon and Shower Honors Miss Lindley

A surprise luncheon and kitchen shower honoring Miss Betty Lou Lindley was given by Mrs. Kenneth Lucas recently. Following the luncheon for which the table was covered with a white lace cloth and decorated with pink gladioli and candles, and opening of gifts, the guests embroidered dish towels for the prospective bride.

Those present besides the honor guest and hostess were: Mrs. J. Hamilton, Los Angeles; Mrs. H. Folgesom, Reno; Mrs. E. S. Lindley, Mrs. John Beckwith, Mrs. Fred Swierski and Mrs. William Baker.

A SUGGESTION for a hot-weather salad that's both appetizing and nourishing: Combine a can of crabmeat with 2 cups of cooked macaroni. Add sliced radishes, chopped green pepper and sliced celery. Mix with seasoned mayonnaise and serve.

Quota Women 'Gallop' Through 3-Course Dinner

Quota Club's "Gallop Dinner" Monday evening was served in three courses and as many homes, under chairmanship of Mrs. Rudolph Malek and Mrs. David Barnhart. The fruit cocktail was served at the home of Mrs. Leon Yearwood, the main course in the home of Mrs. Barnhart, and dessert at the home of Mrs. Earl Blackburn.

Several guests were present, including Mrs. Jack C. Lamb and Mrs. Evatt Fehly, former members; Mrs. James Bottem, Mrs. Dale Arnold, Mrs. Alfred Weerts, Mr. Barnhart and Albert Blank.

No business meeting was called, but there was informal discussion of pertinent matters. It was decided to have a special meeting as a no-host dinner the evening of Sept. 22, when Olive Barber, former columnist for the Register-Guard, will be guest of honor.

Days Celebrate Silver Wedding

JUNCTION CITY — Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Day were hosts to a large group of friends Saturday evening at a buffet supper in Greenwood Hall. The occasion marked their 25th wedding anniversary as well as Mr. Day's birthday. They were married in Eugene in 1927.

Summer flowers were used in decoration throughout the rooms and a bouquet of red roses, a gift to Mrs. Day from her husband, centered the serving table. The honored couple was presented with a silver coffee service, among other gifts. The evening was spent in dancing and visiting.

What's Right?

You dread the thought of going to a funeral.

WRONG: Let that be your excuse for not going to funerals when you know you really should.

RIGHT: Realize that standing by friends in time of sorrow is a duty.

Nurses Association Plans Silver Tea Sunday Afternoon

Lane County Nurses Association is sponsoring a silver tea and "white elephant" sale Sunday afternoon in the gardens of the Walker Clinic, 399 E. 10th Ave. Hours will be 2 to 5 p.m.

Funds raised will be used for the continued support of the Nurses Professional Registry, a community service maintained by the association.

Assisting with arrangements for the affair are Miss Bernice Mather, Miss Ella Pape, Mrs. Charles T. Geary, Mrs. Lawrence Gerbig, and Miss Esther Jacobson. The white elephant sale will be in the charge of Mrs. Grace Huls, Mrs. Lyle Owens, and Mrs. W. H. Lynch.

Officers and members of the district association will act as hostesses. Mrs. Philip C. Hemming and Mrs. Charles D. Thompson will pour the first hour, Mrs. Leonard D. Jacobson and Mrs. J. C. Ingram the second hour, and Mrs. Glenn S. Pirtle and Dr. Madeline Marr the last hour.

For a tasty sandwich dessert, take blackberry jam and spread between two slices of coffee ice cream. Wrap in wax paper and store in freezer compartment of refrigerator until needed.

Make waffle batter the night before and store it in a container on the refrigerator shelf. It saves last-minute preparation.

Marcola Couple Tells Engagement

MARCOLA—Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Stevens held open house Sunday in honor of Miss Marcia Warner, whose engagement to Ronald Stevens, their son, has been announced. Both young people were students at the University of Arizona last year. Mr. Stevens will be graduated at the University of Oregon this year. Miss Warner now is employed in the office of the Fischer Lumber Company. They plan to be married late in September.
