A Sunday Memory

(From The Salvation Army War Cry)

I can remember as if yesterday
A country church on Sunday afternoon;
I see the horses tied to hitching post,
Again hear hymns sung slightly out of tune.

The shimmering summer heat was in the air
And insects droned upon their merry way;
The congregation, dressed in Sunday best,
Half dozing, listened to their preacher say.

A bent old woman, bowed in silent prayer,
In voiceless supplication sought relief.
Within her work-worn hands she tightly held
Her hymnbook wrapped in snowy handkerchief.

My faith grows stronger now as I recall,
And memory visions in the quiet light
A bent old figure, bowed in silent prayer
With humnbook neatly wrapped in kerchief white.

—STELLA HOLSTEN HOHNCKE.

On Education

(From Northwest Christian College Bulletin)

I have often heard that "Education cannot save us."

And yet, speaking in financial terms, aside from war, gambling, liquor and automobiles, education is one of our leading businesses in America.

If education cannot save us, why build an educational system?

Let's make a parallel statement. "Swimming cannot save one." Do you agree? Perhaps circumstances alter cases.

There is need to understand clearly that both education and swimming are methods and arts. They are not ends and purposes.

Swimming can save one from drowning only when the swimmer combines the art of swimming with a right direction and goal. And one who is headed in the right direction but cannot swim is far from safe in the middle of a lake without other means of travel.

So with education. As a method, it can be used to reach any one of many ends. Hitler used the educational method to march a whole nation to death and take much of the world along for companionship.

By the use of repetition, simplicity, beauty in advertising and appeal to various emotions, the educational method has led an amazing percentage of Americans to smoke cigarettes, drink intoxicants, chew gum, eat white bread and take vitamins, and indulge in many other expensive, silly or positively injurious habits. The method is not at fault. The trouble is in the purpose.

On the other hand, the educational method can be used as the vehicle of salvation. With the right goals, education can save. We have seen health education used to establish scientific knowledge so securely in our way of life that yellow fever, typhoid fever and smallpox are now virtually extinct.

In the long view, education which has Christlikeness for its goal is the only thing that can save us. We must, of course, learn of Christ and learn to be like Him. Direction and purpose plus method provide the means of salvation. Those who do not learn the Gospel are not saved by it.

Jesus used the educational method. He taught the multitudes. He taught individuals. He has commanded us to teach.

Northwest Christian College, in common with every Bible School in the world, is engaged in using the educational method to make the redemptive Gospel effective. This, we believe, is the supreme goal of education and the only one with eternal value.
