

Concerns Fail Dispute Charge

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate Small Business Committee Thursday none of seven big oil firms accused monopoly practices has accepted an offer to appear before the committee and dispute the charge.

The monopoly accusations were detailed in a long-suppressed report written by Federal Trade Commission staff members. The report was made public by the Senate committee Monday after President Truman acceded to senators' demands that it be released.

Blake O'Connor, directing the committee's professional staff, said the group will decide now whether to order public hearings of its own on the matter, write a report based on the FTC findings or simply let the report stand.

Sen. John Sparkman of Alabama, the committee chairman and Democratic nominee for vice president, announced in making the report public he was reserving Wednesday and Thursday for public hearings if any of the seven companies wanted to reply.

"We have had no request for a hearing from any of the seven," O'Connor told a reporter. "There have been no takers, so Dr. Walter Adams, the staff member who would have conducted the hearings, is returning to his post as a member of the faculty of Michigan State College at East Lansing, Mich."

The report named the seven companies as Standard Oil of New Jersey, Standard of California, the Texas Co., Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., and Gulf Oil Corp., all incorporated in this country, the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co., largely owned by the British government, and Royal Dutch Shell, owned mainly by Dutch and British interests. In press statements at the time, the companies generally denied any wrongdoing.

$67 MILLION SUITS
The Justice Department is investigating the group, and has filed damage suits totaling $67 million against the two Standard companies, the Texas Co. and Socony-Vacuum.

O'Connor said he considers it "perfectly understandable" that the companies declined an opportunity to answer the FTC while the grand jury inquiry and the law suits are pending.
