Kamermans Write
Of Activities
From Washington

Mrs. J. J. Kamerman has written from Washington, D. C., where she and Mr. Kamerman were guests at Hotel Statler just a few days prior to the inauguration. She writes: "It is a very exciting and interesting city — so many places of interest to visit. We called on our senators, Cordon and Morse, and received cordial greetings and tickets to the Senate and House. We heard Senator Morse plead his case before the Senate on having been given the cold shoulder as to his committee appointments. We were so glad we were at that session. The papers here are giving him a lot of publicity and he surely held the attention that day. The city is all excited about the inauguration and decoration has begun on all buildings and streets."

They visited Mount Vernon and the Bureau of Engraving among many places of interest before leaving for New Orleans.
