Wife of Lawyer Sees Loopholes

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
United Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON 30 — It's not too difficult to outsmart a lawyer, particularly if you happen to be the wife of a lawyer.

That's what Dotty Berger is. Her husband Milton is a barrister around these acres and lives over in Arlington County.

Well, the other day Dotty was cruising in the family hack along about 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. She came to an abrupt halt when across the way she spied somebody she knew, fellow named Alexander Goldberg, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. He happened to be her brother.

She got out of the car and started across the street when the officer on detail blew his whistle on her. My, oh me, thought Dotty, I'm going to catch it for jay-walking.

PARKING TICKET

Instead the officer pulled out his little ticket pad and started scratching out a summons for parking where it said, plain as day, not to.

The officer did what all these fellows do. He asked to see Dotty's driver's permit. He frowned and did some more scratching.

The lady finally paid her respects to Al, and then drove on home. That night she told hubby Milt about her bout with the law.

"Let me give you a little legal advice, dear," Milt said. "You just run down and pay the fine. You haven't a chance."

Right then and there, Dotty started acting like a woman.

"I will not," she said with a capital "N." There is something wrong here, and I'm going to challenge this. And thank you, Milt, I don't need a lawyer."

GOES TO COURT

So at the appointed hour on the appointed day, Dotty hid herself to the courthouse and searched out somebody in authority.

Before the judge had time to bang his gavel she had a little chat with him. She said that there was a few errors on the writing on the ticket.

First off, she pointed out that 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., which incidentally is where President Eisenhower and family live, is in northwest Washington and not southeast, as listed on the ticket. "And," she asked his honor, "don't I look like a female?"

The judge could give only the obvious answer, since Dotty is very lady-like.

"Well," she continued, "he has me put down as a male. And third, he says that I am guilty of disobeying an officer of the law. I did nothing of the kind, your honor. All I did was say 'yes, sir.' Is that disobeying an officer, your honor?"

His honor scratched his head. "All right, you win," he said. "As soon as you lawyers get arrested you have to go and get legalistic about it."

The un-legalistic Mrs. Berger cocked her bonnet at a rakish angle and walked out of the courthouse, a free and happy woman.

HOPE TO RETURN TO AIR

ASTORIA 30 — T. R. Williams, president of the Lower Columbia Broadcasting Co., said Saturday that radio station KVAS hoped to return to the air under new management by mid-January.
