

No Atomic Power Due for Northwest 5-Year Program

By A. ROBERT SMITH
Register-Guard Correspondent

WASHINGTON—There is no atomic power for the Pacific Northwest in the five-year power development program announced last week by the Atomic Energy Commission, and looking beyond that five-year period would require speculation even for experts of the AEC.

The dramatic proposal made last fall that General Electric to build dual-purpose reactors at the Hanford plutonium works has for all practical purposes been turned down, at least for the foreseeable future. It has been included in the five-year power reactor program, although it could be added at some future date as this program may be extended.

The proposal that the government build reactors capable of producing plutonium, which is used in the atomic bomb production line, plus the production of electric energy, would supply both the energy needs of the Hanford plant and some needs of the Pacific Northwest power pool. The net result would be to add a great deal of power of unknown quantity.

OAKRIDGE — Ronel Paddock, left, committeeman for Chamber of Commerce and president Cliff Gear, inspect three "route" signs which, with about 16 others, will be mounted on roads around Oakridge to guide the sportsman and sightseer to strategic points and camp grounds in the Upper Willamette Wonderland. They are standing near the site of a CC Information Center to be built soon on the Highway in Oakridge.

Airport Consultant Willing To Discuss Eugene Airpark

A consultant for the Port of Portland, Leigh Fisher, of South Bend, Ind., has offered to come to Eugene about June 1 to talk with officials about a possible study of the controversial Airpark at 18th and Chambers St.

City Manager Robert Finlayson said Thursday that he has received a letter from Fisher in reply to inquiries made last month. In the letter Fisher said he plans to be in the Portland area during May and is willing to come to Eugene then.

Finlayson said the matter has not yet been taken up with the council, but will be considered when a meeting of the airport committee is called.

He explained that Fisher's visit would concern necessary factors in making a use study of the field and costs of such a survey.

The council directed Finlayson to make the inquiry as the result of controversy over granting of new hangar-space leases at the small plane field.

The Airpark's use as a flying field is also the basis of an injunction suit filed by two citizens living in the area.

Police Search Woman's Home

Stolen Property Found on Premises

The mother of a convicted burglar was arrested Wednesday by Eugene police and charged with possessing stolen property.

She was Frances Esther Dolby, 41, 1068 K St., Springfield, mother of Frank Markley Seaman, sent to the penitentiary two months ago for his part in the burglary of the Cosmo Tavern. Eugene police reported that they searched Mrs. Dolby's house, after obtaining a warrant, and found two movie cameras and a quantity of film. The cameras and film have been identified, detectives said, as taken from the Paramount Drug Co. in Springfield last Oct. 25.

Mrs. Dolby said they were in the house when she moved into it a short time ago.

Her arraignment was continued until Monday in Springfield Justice Court.

A Springfield policeman aided the Eugene officers in their search. Eugene officers were in charge of the investigation as they obtained the initial information regarding the property and thought it might be related to the Seaman case.

Butter Price Drops 8 Cents

Thursday's reduction in the government support price on butter has resulted in an 8-cent cut of the wholesale price in Eugene and Portland market areas.

The Associated Press reports that the support price drop amounted to 9 1/2 cents on Grades A and AA, and that most distributors cut the price on those grades from 72 to 64 cents for retailers.

Meanwhile, in both Eugene and Portland, some stores were advertising butter at 57 and 59 cents a pound while other retailers priced it all the way from 65 to 69 cents.

District Manager Visits Cub Scouts

MONROE — Local Cub Scout Pack 144 held its monthly pack meeting last Tuesday evening with District Manager Wally Pease present to assist with the meeting.

Cub Scout Master John Moody was unable to be present so presiding officer was his assistant, Claude Turner.

The district manager gave an interesting and informative talk on Cub Scouting, according to a report by Mrs. E. W. Hallett, pack secretary, and he also presented registration cards to the local Cub Scout officers.

Two new Cub Scout members were taken in: Eric Hought who was accompanied by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Bardwell.

Charles Cook was installed as den chief of Den 1. The installing officer was Boy Scout Master Durward Johnson.

Den 1 received two awards as follows: Larry Scholman was awarded his bear badge with gold and silver arrow; Paul Schierholz was awarded his bear badge with gold and silver arrow and also his year pin.

The sponsoring agency for Cub Scouting in Monroe is the Monroe Grade School Parent-Teacher Assn. To begin with when the pack was organized here a little more than a year ago there were seven charter members. There are now 19 members. Their meeting place is the Legion-Woodman Hall here. They have free use of the hall and its facilities, Mrs. Hallett said.
