

Courts Uphold Treason Verdict

WASHINGTON (AP)—Justice Department records reveal that in the 12 years there have been 12 legally sustained convictions for treason than in all of the 182 years of the nation's history.

The outbreak of World War II, 10 men and women have been convicted of treason against the United States.

John David Provo, is the only one of the convictions, involved in the Japanese case, who appealed. Provo was convicted Feb. 11, 1953, of giving aid and comfort to the Japanese while in the United States by informing his fellow prisoners and making propaganda broadcasts.

Other cases included such as the broadcast of the Japanese and Japanese as Mildred E. Tamm, known as "Axis Sally," and Iva Toguri d'Aquino, referred to as "Tokyo Rose." Both were convicted in 1949 and are now serving prison terms.

of the World War II traitor, Martin James Monti, he was the first American to confess in open court to treason.

Monti pleaded guilty to charges while a lieutenant in the U.S. Army in Europe during World War II. He stole an American airplane, flew it over the Atlantic, and surrendered to the German forces. He was sentenced to 30 years in prison.

in Turkey

ANBUL, Turkey (AP)—President Truman landed on Turkish soil for a week-long state visit. An extraordinary security force gave the visiting marshal a 21-gun salute. Some 8,000 or more fighters of his partner in the Yugoslav-Turkish defense pact and a flock of Turkey's war-planes were on hand.

to 25 years imprisonment and fined $10,000.

CONSTITUTIONAL CRIME

These cases provided the highlights of the flood of treason prosecutions following World War II. Never before in the country's history has the government taken so many such actions.

Justice Department experts say that the comparative rarity of successful treason prosecutions points up not only the enormity of the crime, but the special significance given to it by the framers of the Constitution. It is the only crime specifically defined in that document.

The constitutional definition was designed to forestall frequent changes in the treason laws, such as had occurred in times past in England and in Europe. With the crime written into the Constitution, it could be changed only through the long procedure of a constitutional amendment, not by a mere act of Congress.
