YOUNG VISITOR, IKE SHARE LAUGH — Judith M. Maxwell of Mansfield, O., not only received a four-year scholarship but a big laugh when she visited President Eisenhower at the White House Thursday morning with five other teen-age winners of AMVETS awards. The informal bit of fun came during a discussion of each student's study plans.

charges against him and his committee staff. "I think that is responsible for the hearings here today," he declared.

McCarthy said he also thought "part" in preparation of the "false charges" was due to his insistence on finding out who was responsible for the honorable discharge Feb. 1 of Maj. Irving Peress, an Army dentist described by McCarthy as "a fifth amendment Communist."

Peress declined last winter to answer questions from McCarthy.

ed discrimination by the company against employees for union activities.

These union charges were answered by management representatives in statements to Clara Adland, Register-Guard correspondent. The management side was voiced by A. P. Dewey, vice president for Hines in Oregon; Joseph Fitzgerald, secretary of Hines from Chicago; and N. A. Westfir manager.

The company spokesmen said employees have always been given a rating according to the work they do. There is not enough work to give extra power for takeoffs.

A mixture of water and alcohol is injected into the combustion chamber of each of the B-47's six jet engines. This increases the flow of fuel into the engines and the velocity of the jet gases, thereby providing greater thrust.

The system was devised by engineers for the General Electric Co., producer of the Stratojet's J47 engines.
