Try Making This Triple Header Window Valance

Here's a way to give your favorite window a glamorous treatment and make it useful as well. The trick is to frame your window with this commodious valance-bookcase-record cabinet which combines beauty and utility in an harmonious way. Imagine being able to store everything from books to bric-a-brac to blankets in this beautiful, easy to make built-in.

And, even better, you can build it yourself at very low cost. It's easy—just read the simple directions on the Build-It-Yourself Pattern No. 271, follow them and you will have a product of your own handiwork that would cost you at least twice as much readymade.

This three-in-one piece of furniture can be built to frame any window you select. At the same time, flanks it with neat bookcases which stand-in as shadow boxes for your pet ceramics, trailing ivy or extra-special dishes.

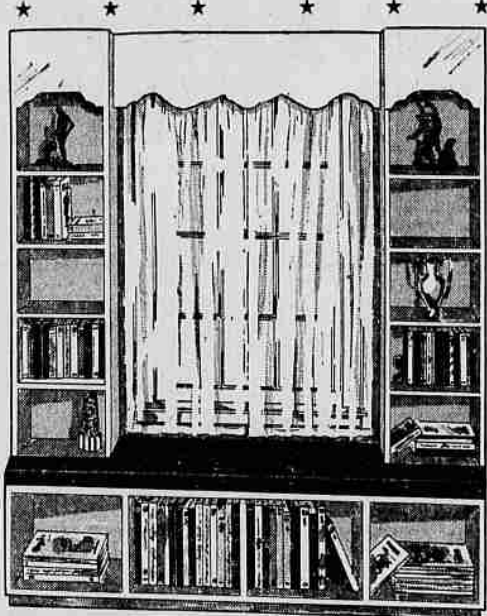

The valance is decorative and gives the window a sense of "belonging" while at once tying together the bookcases and the cabinets underneath. The latter are partitioned off to hold all kinds of articles, as, for instance, linens, records, miscellaneous vases or toys.

You might even install a loud-speaker and place your radio or record player here. If so, you would have ample space for accompanying records or magazines. Or you might store your favorite picture collections and view them here—even that stamp collection could find refuge from ruffling fingers on these shelves.

This striking piece can be made by you—in any dimensions to fit your window—at very little cost, either in money or labor. If you can read, you can build. Just send for Pattern No. 271, which includes a complete list of materials, full instructions and step by step assembly illustrations.

To finish this beauty, paint or wallpaper to blend with the decor of your room. Or match the walls, particularly if placed in rather small space. You might shade the backs of the bookcases a darker or contrasting shade. The ideas are many, but it is best to let your view of the articles on display take center stage. The valance bookcase then serves to complement your treasured possessions.

CONCEALED DINNERWARE storage cabinet eliminates furniture, saves housework, gives more freeway in dining-living area and saves countless steps. Snug-fitting panel doors are not visible when closed. Made of west coast hemlock like the rest of the walls, they blend perfectly.

Hidden Storage Cabinets Step-Saving Space Savers

Another step forward in woman's search for freedom from housework is a concealed cabinet for dinnerware close to point of use and built right into the wall.

This is just another bonus from good home planning. By taking to the walls for storage you eliminate the upkeep on another piece of furniture and gain more freeway space in your dining-living area. You also save steps by building the foldaway cabinet midway between kitchen and dining room.

This magical storage unit will fit into any wall and it doesn't need more than twelve to fifteen inches of depth. It is especially adaptable for narrow wall areas between doors, which is generally lost space and difficult to decorate. Furniture hardly ever fits into such a narrow section.

Ideal way to conceal the storage unit is behind snug-fitting doors which should be made of the same panel boards as the rest of the wall. West coast hemlock or Douglas fir boards lend themselves beautifully to this use. In fact, it is possible to build the doors so they become so much a part of the wall they are not even visible when closed. Generally the doors are held in place by a touch latch which releases with a slight pressure on the panel.

The cabinet can be tailor-made to accommodate the particular storage requirements of the family. Linens and silverware are kept in tray drawers in the lower part of the unit. Open shelves provide ample storage space for china and glassware and can be

Corrugated Sheets
Make Distinctive,
Durable Fence

A distinctive fence, contributing an attractive note of individuality to your property, can be built with corrugated asbestos-cement sheets. Produced in a standard width of 42 inches, the sheets are available in lengths from 3 to 12 feet. Of mineral composition, they are unusually hard and strong. They can be painted, but that is not necessary to preserve them, since they are immune to rust, rot and corrosion.

Alligator Paint

Alligatoring or checking of house paint is usually caused by putting a relatively hard finish over soft undercoats. Another cause is not allowing enough time for undercoats to dry properly.

Today's Porch Is Functional

A few years back the porch was used mainly as a vantage point for sitting and watching the neighbors, and catching the evening breezes. Now, however, a well-planned porch might be a second living room outdoors, a kitchen with a barbecue, a playground and a place for entertaining. Yet porches become even more useful when they lead somewhere.

A porch can solve the problems of reaching the garage in bad weather and serve as an extra living space for the family as well. Build yours along the front or rear of your home and provide some sort of roof, turning the porch into a convenient passage-way to the garage. Add cut stone planter boxes or a low stone wall to ensure privacy yet leave the porch open. A flagstone floor would add color and convenience, for it is so easy to keep clean.

A passage-way porch such as this particularly suits the ranch style house, but it can be adapted to any type: two story, split level, modern, rambling or period. And stone fits into any type of plan regardless, always adding distinction and beauty while providing durability and economical maintenance year after year.
