Bethel, Eugene Meeting Again

Groups to Attempt To Reach Agreement

The Eugene City Council and the citizens committee of the Bethel Water District will hold another meeting at the Bethel Fire Station Monday night at 8 p. m. in an attempt to resolve differences of opinion on annexation versus incorporation of the water district.

This will be a continuation of a meeting started last Thursday night. Both groups made statements and gave background of the issue between the two, but took no action in the attempt to get together.

The Bethel committee has been defending petitions now in the hands of the county board of commissioners calling for formation of Bethel City northwest of Eugene. The commissioners have been delaying a boundary decision until all sides are studied.

Eugene councilmen have been fighting for further delay in an effort to inform the citizens of the Bethel-Danebo district on all aspects of annexation to Eugene.

Members of the county board said Monday that they will probably delay the boundary decision again, after conclusion of a public meeting slated for Tuesday at 10 a. m. They said the Lane County district attorney has told them the decision could be held back to permit further study of new petitions for boundary changes.

Meanwhile, City Councilmen Ray Siegenthaler Monday was preparing a question and answer form for distribution to Bethel citizens. The sheet explains the city council's side of the issue, with answers to questions the Bethel people might ask about annexation to Eugene.

River Measure Gets Joint OK

$3,000,000 Listed For Lookout Point

WASHINGTON (AP)—A House-Senate Conference Committee announced Monday it has agreed on an appropriation bill carrying $457,071,300 for Army civil functions, mostly for navigation and river projects.

This represented a compromise between totals voted by the House and Senate. The House had approved $430,963,700 and the Senate hiked the total to $484,095,500.

The total compares with President Eisenhower's budget recommendation of $465,160,000.

Of the total, $436,379,100 is for planning, construction and operation of flood control and rivers and harbors projects by army engineers. The amount for construction is $300,367,600.

The compromise now goes to both the House and the Senate for consideration.

The compromise bill would provide construction and planning funds for these projects.

Construction funds: Oregon: Lookout Point Reservoir $3 million; McNary Lock and Dam, $24 million; The Dalles $36 million; Willamette River bank protection, $300,000.

Planning funds: Idaho: Columbia River local protection, Idaho, Oregon, Washington, Wyoming, Utah, Nevada and Montana, $80,000.

Oregon: Hells Creek Reservoir $125,000; Pendleton $15,000.

Washington: Colfax $10,000; Eagle Gorge reservoir $170,000.

Army-McCarthy Row Still Alive

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Joseph P. Kamp (R-Ore.) said Monday he would spend the next 20 days investigating the McCarthy row, and still not get to the bottom of it.

He told reporters he hoped to have a 30-day televised public hearing at which he presided over the salient facts.

Kamp made the statement as announced postponement of a hearing on McCarthy's "consultative" committee to explore the points of contention among the four Republicans and three Democrats.

Kamp had called a meeting of the group for Monday morning, but it proved inconvenient for members to attend.

He hoped they could get the hearing and, among other things, find out prospects for a special counsel Ray H. Harbo to help write a "verdict" on McCarthy.

Kamp told reporters he is ready to agree to take on the job. He said he would be available to do any investigation by the committee as it is necessary, he is going to see the job through.

Kamp's statement was in an interview at which, in response to questions as to whether he might run for the Senate, he said some friends expressed doubts about his ability to run on the crest of a wave received as counsel.

Kamp said he has not yet made a decision, but "I'll know in two weeks" whether he will run. He said he was interviewed on a television show Sunday night, Jenkins said he would have McCarthy campaign in his behalf. He strongly expressed doubts about McCarthy's efforts to influence the public as a "dam fool."

McCarthy left last weekend for a week's vacation at an unannounced spot and could not be reached for comment. He has not publicly retracted his accusations against Hensel. In substance, these are that Hensel guided the Army charges against McCarthy in the hope of warding off a McCarthy investigation of whether Hensel, while a Navy official in World War II, improperly profited through his financial interest in a private firm.

Firemen Check 5,273 Homes In Safety Tour

More than 5,273 Eugene homes have been checked so far in the fire department's current home safety inspection tour. Fire department officials said Monday that this is approximately two-thirds of all homes in Eugene.

Crews were busy early Monday morning making house-to-house calls throughout the remainder of the city.

The inspection tour is made to acquaint residents with fire hazards. The firemen simply tell occupants of some of the hazardous conditions spotted on the home tour.

Occupants are not required to let the firemen inspect the homes. In the last report, firemen were refused admittance to a total of 221 homes in the city. That's since the program began on June 1.

One of the worst offenses found so far, according to fire officials, is the use of "extension cord wiring." Fire Marshal Lester Barker said there were 291 cases of such wiring. There have also been 784 cases of overfusing—a companion hazard with the extension cord wiring, he said.

Youth Draws Term in Jail

A 22-year-old Eugene motorist was fined $145 and sentenced to 10 days in jail Monday after pleading guilty in District Court to reckless driving.

The motorist, Harold D. Hays, 446 E. 12th Ave., was arrested by Lane County Sheriff's deputies after Hays' vehicle failed to make a turn onto Bertelton Rd. and ran into a house occupied by Kenneth E. Bowser. The house was heavily damaged, deputies said.

In court Monday, Hays told District Judge Chester N. Anderson: "I believe I fell asleep at the wheel."

A sheriff's deputy told the court, however, that skid marks measured 195 feet and that alcoholic beverages were found in the car.

In another case, Billy Jo Thompson, 21, Veneta, was sentenced to 30 days in jail after pleading guilty to being drunk on a public highway.

Donald C. Walker, 25, 825 D St., Springfield, was arraigned on a charge of larceny by bailer.

Anderson set bail of $500 and scheduled a preliminary hearing for Tuesday at 2:45 p.m.

Two Fires Put Out With Small Damage

Grease burning in a deep-well cooker at the home of Duane Johnston, 2953 Portland St., Sunday afternoon was halted by Eugene firemen, with little damage to the cooker.

A little later, at 6:15 p.m., fire crews went to a grocery store at 2480 Alder St. where a wire in a meat cooler had shorted out and burned into the wall. The market is owned by Bill Stuart. There was little damage.
