

Foreign Policy

is dependent on many vital raw materials from foreign sources and that it could not exist as the powerful nation it is without cooperation of countries outside the Americas.

3. Island strategy—This concept, representing a kind of bridge between the "fortress" policy and the policy of alliances fits with many of the facts of America's position in the world today but does not embrace all of them. Essentially it holds that America's best allies are those on islands—Japan, the Philippines, Australia, New Zealand and Britain. By extension it would include stout anti-Communist nations like Spain and South Korea—both peninsulas. It does not make provision, however, for a defense in the heart of Europe based on either Germany or France. It is in line with some speculation at the State department that an alternative to a French-German reconciliation is a peripheral strategy, meaning a system based around the rim of Europe in places like Britain, Spain and Italy.

4. Security through strength—This is the policy which the Truman and Eisenhower administrations have both followed. It depends for its success on strong and reliable allies and on getting along with them. It has cost the United States many billions of dollars in military and economic assistance and it is the policy which administration officials presently intend to pursue to the limit.

Nevertheless, it is also the policy which would have to undergo the acid test of congressional and public support in any future great debate. And such a debate seems certain to develop by the end of the year if Britain, France and many other nations join with Russia and various cold war neutrals to vote Red China into the U.N., and if France meanwhile persists in blocking the European Defense Community with Germany.

Soviet Guards Halt Firemen

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Fire Department ran into a Russian veto Monday night when two fire companies were barred from the Park Ave. building housing the Soviet delegation to the United Nations.

The equipment responded to an alarm by a passer-by that smoke, sparks and possibly flames were coming from the delegation building.

The firemen were turned back by the guards, however. A Russian, who described himself as the "officer on duty," said the delegation personnel was "only using a fireplace" and there was no reason for firemen to have come.

A fire official surmised that paper had been burned inside the building, as firemen saw sparks and paper ash, apparently rising through a screen covering an incinerator chimney.
