CinemaScope Not His Dish
Director Doubts Big Screen's Value
By ALINE MOSBY
Of The United Press

HOLLYWOOD — CinemaScope epics are hailed as the savior of the movie industry, but director Elia Kazan said this week he doesn't like the wide-screen process and "I don't think it will last long."

The most controversial feature of Hollywood's wide-screen revolution is how some drama, besides medieval spectacles and westerns, can be portrayed effectively on the gigantic screens.

Kazan currently is making his first CinemaScope movie for Warner studio, "East of Eden," an "intimate" drama. And he fearlessly admitted "I'm not enthusiastic about CinemaScope."

PREDICTS SHORT STAY
"Warner won't like this, I guess, but I think Fox studio (creators of CinemaScope) is off on the wrong foot," said the director, respected in the film industry for his honesty.

"I don't think it will last long," Kazan said he prefers a screen ratio of 1.85 to 1, which is slightly wider than the conventional screen.

He recently released "On the Waterfront," an exciting picture and one of the year's best, was filmed in the conventional size in good, old-fashioned black and white. Many other top pictures of 1954—"Country Girl," "Sabrina," "Rear Window" and "Caine Mutiny"—also were shot in the ordinary size.

STUDIO PREFERRED IT
Kazan said he wasn't forced to do "East of Eden" in CinemaScope, but the studio "preferred" that he did.

"I think I've treated CinemaScope a little differently in this picture," the director said. "I did not use it the way they've been using it. I don't think you will have the feeling of that big screen."

"For one scene I tilted the camera sideways. For another the screen is blacked out except for a slit that you see through—anything to break up that mailbox slot size of CinemaScope."

"Actually I tried to shoot most of the picture just as I would for the conventional screen."

GOOD FOR LETTUCE
"We've got lettuce fields in this picture," he grinned. "CinemaScope is good for that."

Kazan admitted CinemaScope has brought new prosperity to the movies.

"But I think that's too bad—not that Fox studio made money from it, but that it was because of a technical reason," he said.

THIEVES GET $1,000
KLAMATH FALLS — Thieves got $1,000 in cash and $101 in postage from the Buy Low Food Center here Wednesday night. They rolled a safe into a meat locker and pounded it open, police said.

Boone Takes Academy Job
ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Rear Adm. Walter F. Boone, who thinks he just might be kin to the legendary Kentucky Woodsman, Daniel, took over as 38th superintendent of the Naval Academy Thursday.

The 56-year-old Boone, who graduated from the Navy school 34 years ago, succeeded Rear Adm. Charles A. Buchanan, who has held temporary command since Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy retired July 1. Buchanan reverted to his capacity as commandant of midshipmen.

Boone came to Annapolis from two years duty as naval member of the Strategic Survey Committee, principal advisory committee of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He graduated from the academy in 1921.

Professor Resigns
MOSCOW, Idaho — The resignation of Professor Wayne Young as chairman of the department of journalism at the University of Idaho was announced Thursday. Young is quitting as a professor and department head—to become a law student at Idaho.

MARIAN CARR takes part of circus aerialist in "Ring of Fear," exciting drama now playing at the McDonald, and starring Clyde Beatty, Pat O'Brien and Mickey Spillane.

Shipping Measure Goes to President
WASHINGTON — The House Thursday passed and sent to the White House a bill to provide that 50 per cent of all government-sponsored foreign aid cargoes be transported in American ships.

The measure would establish the 50 per cent provision as a permanent law in the shipping of foreign aid cargoes.
