

State Surveys Bring Optimism

Governor Reports Industrial Chances

SALEM — A survey of Oregon's manufacturing potential which started last month is bringing results, reports by state agencies to Gov. Paul L. Patterson indicated Friday.

Material needed by several different industries here has been found available from nearby operations, saving considerable waste and inefficiency in handling, those in charge of the study said. Considerable progress has been made also through federal agencies in bringing Oregon operations to the attention of those handling defense contracts. Many plants around the state, the study found, already have equipment to handle these needs, while others can be easily converted.

Gov. Patterson commented: "We have only started this study but, from results already reported, we know we are on the right track. As the material is analyzed and organized, we are sure that it will help increase output and will provide many more jobs for Oregonians."

Information supplied by many of the 4,130 plant owners being contacted by representatives of the State Unemployment Compensation Commission is being used to help establish industries build up operations here. Other agencies already actively co-operating in the continuing program include the Oregon Development Commission and Small Business Administration.

The survey will be continued and extended through the fall and winter. Information concerning available machinery and equipment, plant locations, occupational and skill classification of workers, and description of products is being requested by the 26 state employment offices in Oregon.

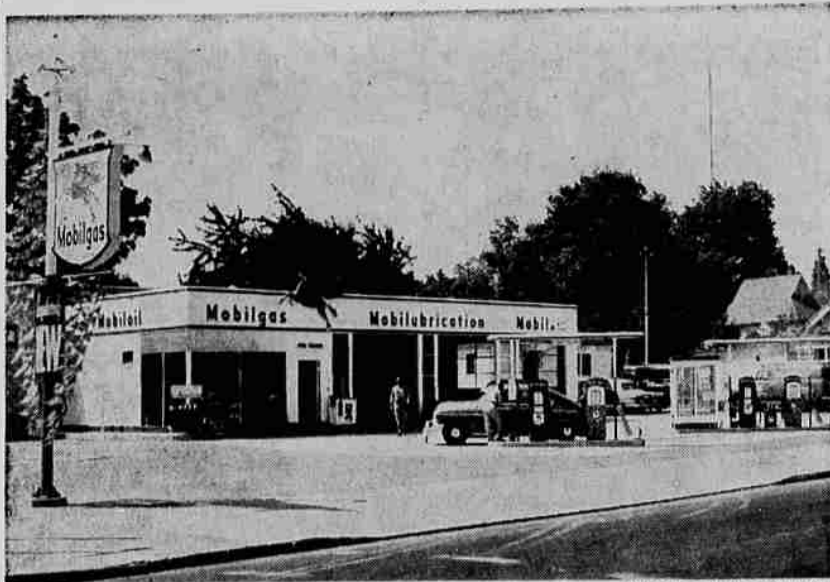

Fund Appeal Opens For Canby Farmer

PORTLAND — A campaign is starting to raise money for Elmer Deetz's fight to repeal the state milk control law.

Ed Foss, Portland insurance man, said he was heading a committee to raise the "Defend Elmer Fund." The newspaper, The Oregonian, reported 50 per cent of the money collected would go to Elmer Deetz, the Canby dairyman, who has long fought milk controls.

Foss said Thomas R. Mahoney, Portland attorney, is legal advisor. He said there also are these committee members: George Moser, Portland insurance man; F. G. Lawrence, Oregon City accountant; Logan Rutherford, Canby farmer; Donald Helmick, and J. O. Helmick, Sherwood chicken growers; Thelma Larrance, Redmond, and Ed Thompson, Oregon City.

Deetz said at Canby that he had contracted with Foss to raise campaign funds. Foss said there will be state-wide solicitation.

NOW OPEN for business at 7th and Charnelton Sts., this new Mobilgas station is operated by Ted Hearn, a veteran of 18 years local experience. Hearn, who is president of the Lane County Gasoline Dealers Assn., was superintendent of stations here for a major gasoline firm before leasing the new station as an independent dealer. Constructed by Contractor Jim Turner of Corvallis, this station has three service islands and three service bays. The building is of steel faced with porcelain.

Session Deals With Turkeys

A district educational meeting of the Oregon Turkey Growers Assn. will be held Wednesday evening, 8 p.m., August 25, at the 4-H Club building, Lane County Fairgrounds, according to Paige L. Hall, county extension agent.

The meeting, open to all interested persons, has been arranged in cooperation with the Oregon Turkey Growers Assn., the Lane County Turkey Growers Assn., and the Lane County Extension Office to bring all turkey growers together to gain any new information in regard to turkey growing.

N. L. Bennion, poultry specialist and E. M. Dickinson, professor of veterinary medicine, both of Oregon State College, will be at the meeting to discuss turkey feeding problems and also anything new that would help reduce costs. Arrangements have been made with William Gurits, general manager of the Oregon Turkey Growers Assn., to appear on the program. There will also be a question and answer session as part of the meeting.

A business meeting of the Lane County Turkey Growers Assn. will be held following the discussion part of the meeting.

Firm Buying Fir Cones

The Manning Seed Co. of Seattle now is buying Douglas fir cones in Lane County, according to their area buyer, Carl C. Boyd.

He has set up buying stations in three parts of the county. The main station, open Mondays and Tuesdays, is at 2247 Main St. in Springfield. On Thursdays he will be buying at 4th St. and the highway in Cottage Grove. Saturdays he will be at Dexter.

Boyd said he will pay $4 per sack for unlimited quantities of good 1954 cones from freshly downed trees. Sacks must be sewn to get full price.

Boyd said Manning has been supplying seeds for replanting of cut-over and burned off areas for 76 years. Most of the seed used locally has been supplied by Manning, he said. It is the largest company of its kind and imports and exports seeds. The company has not bought locally since 1940, he said, and in the interim has been buying pine cones east of the mountains.

The Douglas fir cones must be green and contain seeds. Brown cones that have opened up are not usable.

More information can be gotten by contacting Boyd, whose address is 1760 J. St. in Springfield.

FARM CENSUS PROJECT SLATED

SEATTLE — Washington, Oregon and Idaho farmers are going to get their noses counted. And also their stock. And also they're going to be asked some questions.

That's why Ray Hurley, chief of the Census Bureau's agriculture division, was here Wednesday. He and his aids are giving a 5-day course to enumerators on how to conduct a farm inventory.

The census in the three states will be supervised by Guy Rainboth of the Seattle district census office.

Any business which produces $150 worth of agricultural products a year will be included in the census. This means the enumerators will go into large cities for such businesses as nurseries and poultry and egg producers, as well as tackling the larger farms.

Rainboth said it will be the first time a farm census was taken in the fall instead of in April. He says a more accurate report should result when harvesting figures still are fresh in the minds of the farmers.

The government uses the information to forecast farm trends and to estimate crop and livestock production.

Portland — Diversion from regular sales channels of 22 per cent of the Oregon and Washington filbert crop was recommended Tuesday by the Filbert Control Committee.

A crop of 9,560 tons—twice last year's harvest—has been forecast for this year, the committee reported. This would result in 143,000 bags of salable filberts compared with an expected demand of 110,000 bags.

The secretary of agriculture must approve the recommendation before it can be put in effect.

A CONTRACT for grading 4.1 miles of the Blue River Road and for construction of bridges over Lookout Creek and Blue River has been let to J. W. Briggs Co., Bend, the Bureau of Public Roads reported Friday from Portland. The contract price was announced as $209,583.

HENRY L. (Hank) NAESSENS, 181 Clinton Drive, Eugene, has been appointed as the new service manager for Ted Reed Nash, 805 Pearl St. Naessens, who has had nine years' experience in Nash service work here, was an Air Force master sergeant and a service group aircraft inspector in the Pacific theater of war operations. Married, he has two sons.

A $35,000 building permit was issued this week for construction of a two-story office building at 1212 High St. Occupying a site where two houses have just been demolished, the building will be of wood frame and masonry construction. Off-street parking will be provided adjacent to the structure. Owner of the building is M. Vitus; contractor for the job is Fred Braatz. Another permit has been written for a new sandwich shop to be erected and owned by W. H. Christopherson. Located at 95 E. 18th Ave., this building is being constructed on a $5,000 permit.

CONFIDENCE in the industrial future of this area was expressed this week by D. J. Russell, president of the Southern Pacific Co., in commenting upon the railroad's purchase of 84 acres of land in the Seneca industrial district west of Eugene. "This property," Russell said, "will provide sites for industry in the development that I feel is inevitable for this region."

The appointment of William A. Sparks as outside sales representative for the United Air Lines here is announced by C. A. Eberhardt, station ground service manager in Eugene. Sparks joined United in 1952 and, before coming to Eugene, was located in Reno, Nevada. Born in Syracuse, N.Y., Sparks went to high school in Pennsylvania and a Maryland Sparks attended Charlotte Hall Military Academy in Maryland following graduation from high school. He is married and has three children.

MEMBERS of the sales staff of Northwest Industrial Laundry Co., Eugene, were among top winners in a recently concluded company sales contest, according to an announcement by Dan P.
