

What a Wonderful Bird Is the Cuckoo!

AMONG BIRDS, assuredly, the all-time contenders for laziness are the American cowbird and the Old-World cuckoo, no relation. Their marital ties are free and easy; they don't build nests; the tedium of hatching eggs is never theirs; and other birds need their gluttonous young. Yet their indolent, parasitic lives are among the most fascinating in wild life.

However, some birds recognize the cowbird's deceit. One, the yellow warbler, may dispose of an intruded egg by building a second floor atop its old nest. In fact, three stories may be built before the warbler will resign itself to hatching a fake egg.

(Before laying her egg in the nest, the cuckoo usually removes one of the host's eggs in her open beak—thus fostering the popular conception that the cuckoo lays its egg on the ground and then flies with it to the foster bird's nest.)

To aid further the parasitic offspring, they hatch in an extraordinarily short time. Where the parrot's eggs take from 12-13 days, the cow-bird's take only

Besides, for even greater assurance of survival, both the cowbird's and cuckoo's young ruthlessly destroy their foster parent's eggs and legitimate young. To facilitate the dastardly deed the cuckoo, which is born naked and blind, has evolved a mechanical aid—a hollow back. Being a heavy youngster, it wiggles to the bottom of the nest, hunches the eggs or mesmates on its back, and then by raising itself, hoists them over the side.

When he has outgrown the tiny nest, the over-grown usurper opens his long wings and flies from perch to perch with his "Accident Facts," the council's statistical yearbook, shows that nearly two out of every five fatal motor vehicle accidents occur on Saturdays and Sundays.

When the days grow shorter in company with other young cuckoos, these European birds pack up and head south, eventually reaching Africa where they spend the winter.

Bed Rest Still Best Remedy For Pesky Common Cold

It is particularly distressing to see a small infant with that pesky nuisance, the common cold. They always seem so extremely uncomfortable and as though their feelings were hurt by this sign of cruelty in the world.

Nevertheless, nose drops, inhalants, liquid and solid medicines, gargles, special diets, lemon cures and innumerable treatments will be used by thousands.

The supply of moisture to the nose and throat by means of steam inhalations is probably of some help at the very beginning. Cathartics or laxatives are hardly desirable unless needed for other reasons, and if used to extremes these may cause too much loss of fluids from the body.
